National Australia Bank

October 2007.

A reminder to the National Australia Bank of the fraud they have engaged in.

Copies also personalised & sent to those indicated on page #2.
illegally debited from our bank account, without our consent, our knowledge or authority.

6. When we detected account irregularities, (and advised National Australia Bank staff of that detection) you then chose to conspire with your financial adviser, Paul Burness of Scott Partners Malvern Victoria, to place our business under receivership in his hands, thus to liquidate our business & assets knowing that you held both fiduciary culpability & liability in the antecedent events leading to our insolvency.

7. You then took possession & sold at a mortgage’s auction assets from my fellow directors (ie their family home). In National Australia Bank v Voloshin (NSW Supreme Court 2009) the mere attempt by your bank to repossess a customer’s property under such circumstances was declared “unconscionable” & was refused.

8. In an effort to negate your legal liabilities to us, your customer, you forced us to bankruptcy.

Is this an isolated case? Well apparently not:

--- Refer Herald Sun, Monday 24th of Jan 2005, the headline is “$3.2m siphoned off”.

The professional person – and/or chartered accountant.

Both mirror images of your conduct in respect of Bastide, there are undoubtedly more.

Your customers, Nemor Varity Pty Ltd & the Griffith family had to take you to court to retrieve their hard earned money. My reading of court proceedings in the Griffith case is: The National Australia Bank’s defence has been struck out. So too was your defence in Nemor Varity.

This is systemic fraud on your part Sir, your corporation are thugs, thieves & the leaders of white-collar is the personification of organised crime in Australia.

I will see you soon.

Yours in the federal quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

NAB loses cheque case; ordered to pay $600,000

Malkineh Starr

National Australia Bank Ltd has lost another major legal battle in its ongoing conflict with Malcolm Starr, a former mushrooms supplier. The bank, which has lost several other cases involving the former bank employee, was ordered to pay Mr Starr $600,000 last week. The decision is the latest in a string of legal losses for the world's largest bank.

Makymbe Diva trainer among accountant's victims

$3.2m siphoned off

Makymbe Diva was a 3-year-old filly who won the Roses Stakes in 2004. She was owned and trained by Jason Hall, who was also the trainer of the 2005 Breeders' Cup Classic winner, Zenyatta. Hall was arrested in 2006 and charged with fraud after it was revealed that he had siphoned off more than $3.2 million from his clients. The money was used to fund his lavish lifestyle and to pay off his debts. Hall was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Dear Mr Buckman,

I refer to our recent telephone conversation in relation to claims you have made against the National. As requested, I am advising our position in writing.

Since the issues raised have previously been responded to, we reiterate the following:

1. As Basstech is/was in liquidation, any claims made by Basstech must be made by the liquidator;
2. As you have been declared Bankrupt, any claims made regarding your Personal Estate must be made by the Trustee in Bankruptcy.

In addition, we recommend that you seek independent legal advice on the claims made.

If you would like to discuss this further, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Yours faithfully

Glenn Leyden

National Australia Bank
Mr. John Stewart, Managing Director
271 Collins St
MELBOURNE 3000

17th of November 2005.

Dear Sir,

Please find attached an open letter to all, I am seeking answers as to why a powerful corporation, the National Australia Bank, is empowered & protected by the legislative, justice, legal, regulatory & investigative agencies of this country to defraud its customers and break the law? If anyone can reasonably explain & justify these things to me I could eagerly walk away and be forever grateful.

The problem as I see it is the very nature of the corporation itself. The corporations' sole legal imperative it seems to be to maximise its own self-interest that is its profit, hence the shareholders interests. "To obey the law is simply a cost effective decision, if the chance of getting caught and the penalty are less than it costs to comply, our people think of it as just a business decision." [an extract from "The Corporation" by Joel Bakan quoting Robert Mundel,] I warmly commend to you - both the book & the DVD of the same name.

Law professor Bruce Welling states the logic this way: "The practical business view is that a fine is an additional cost of doing business. A prohibited activity is not inhibited by the threat of a fine so long as the anticipated profits from the activity outweigh the amount of the fine multiplied by the probability of being apprehended and convicted. Considering the amount of the average fine, deterrence is improbable in most cases. The argument is even more obvious regarding prevention and recidivism. The corporation, once convicted and fined, will simply have learned how to cover its tracks better."

Beware the upcoming Federal, sorry, Federal Industrial Relations Laws.

Yours in the foremost quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

To whom it concerns

This is an open letter and addressed to the Customers of the National Australia Bank, to the National Australia Bank itself & to those mentioned within, but specifically To Whom ever is interested in ethics, equity & Justice (I know – it’s an absurd & notionl concept with no prospects of reality – but one does live in hope – some day people will matter).

To John Stewart & the National Australia Bank

Well g’day Johno & Co, as you can see I’m back. I hope you don’t mind me calling you Johno as I’ve written to you so many times we are almost pen pals.

And John, I intend to face your customers, the public, and your shareholders, Brokers, the Fund Managers & Investment Advisors etc etc

(a more readable bill board is attached)

As always I formally advise you of my actions & when I enact them, I promised you that a while ago as a matter of courtesy; and I will at all times advise the staff of your local branch when I move into their area. I shall also request that your staff formally advise your office of that fact at that time.

Once again, should you wish to sue me for libel & defamation so be it. Similarly, should you wish to have me arrested for trespass then that too is your decision. I personally welcome any & every opportunity to defend my conduct in these events, the question is - do you?

John, to reiterate previous correspondence, you acted & run a convicted criminal corporation; to remind you, in June 2004 the National Australia Bank went within a micron of having your entire Irish business & assets confiscated & liquidated by the High Court of the Republic of Ireland for:

1. Maintaining & operating bogus non-resident accounts in branches designed to enable customers to evade tax through concealment of funds from the Tax Office.
2. Maintaining & operating “fictitiously named” accounts in branches designed to enable customers to evade tax through concealment of funds from the Tax Office.
3. Promoting CMI policies as secure Investments for funds undisclosed to the Tax Office, ie bottom of the harbour schemes
4. Tax Evasion
5. Defrauding your Irish customers through the improper charging of interest.
6. Defrauding your Irish customers through the improper charging of fees.

The National Irish Bank – was a wholly owned subsidiary of the National Australia Bank at that time.

John, your bank has in this the Bastech case:

1. Detected forged signatures on your customer’s cheques & chose to ignore that fact.
2. You (the National Australia Bank) then chose not to “enquire of your customer” or to alert them of these detections – that is, cash incident of “theft & fraud in progress”.
3. You then chose to comply with the theft to defraud your customer by honouring those forged cheques & debiting your customers account of $218,750 from 152 cheques.
4. You knowingly participated in the conversion of stolen property to cash.
5. You then charged us, your customer, in excess of $21,000 for this privilege. That is you charged us in excess of $21,000 in Interest & other fees & charges for services not provided on that money (illegally debited from our account, without our consent, our knowledge or authority.
6. When we detected account irregularities, (and advised National Australia Bank staff of that detection) you then chose to comply with our financial advisor, Paul Burness of Scott Partners Malvern Victoria, to place our business under receivership in his hands, then to liquidate our business & assets knowing that you held fiduciary culpability & liability in the antecedent events leading to our insolvency.
7. You then took possession of & sold at a mortgagee’s auction assets from my fellow directors (ie their family homes). In National Australia Bank vs Volechkin (NSW Supreme Court 2000) the mere attempt by your bank to repossess a customer’s property under such circumstances was declared “unconscionable” & was refused – ACCC please note.
8. In an effort to negate your legal liabilities to us, your customer, you forced us to bankruptcy.

Is this an isolated case? Well apparently not:

- Refer Australian Financial Review 17th of September 1999, National Australia Bank v Nemar Variity Pty Ltd (Supreme Court of Victoria). The professional person – an Insurance Intermediary.
- Refer Herald Sun, Monday 24th of Jan 2003, the headline is “$3.2m siphoned off”. The professional person – another chartered accountant.

Both mirror images of your conduct in respect of Bastech, there are undoubtedly more.
The story in short form: Good people hire "Professional Person", "Professional Person" steals cheques, "Professional Person" forges signatures on cheques, National Australia Bank clears forged cheques, National Australia Bank illegally debits their customers account - ie - theft, conversion & conspiracy to defraud by your bank against your customer.

Your customers, Nemur Varity Pty Ltd & the Griffith family had to take you to court to retrieve their hard earned money. My reading of court proceedings in the Griffith case is: The National Australia Bank's defence has been struck out. So too was your defence in Nemur Varity.

This is systemic fraud on your part John, your corporation are thugs, thieves & the leaders of white-collar is the personification of organised crime in Australia.

To those notable "defenders of the honest citizen & the public interest"

I find it difficult to believe that a corporate member of an industry that are the foundation stone of the Australian Financial system can actively & systematically defraud their customer, to threaten the safety & security of depositors' funds, & have the principal regulatory, investigative & prosecution authorities accept that conduct as acceptable is extraordinary.

Australian Competition & Consumer Commission

You appear to accept that a bank has an innate right to defraud their customer & see no issue with this banks mitigate conduct noted above. At no time has this esteemed authority seen fit to enquire or seek further evidence or information from me in relation to my complaints to them in this matter.

The ACCC also claim no jurisdiction, they claim it is the responsibility of ASIC even though the events took place prior to ASIC gaining responsibilities in the financial sector. That is the criminal events occurred in 1998/1999 ASIC gained jurisdiction in 2001 I believe.

The ACCC's conduct is at best incompetence, at worst collusion & active protection of the bank's right to defraud their customer.

Australian Prudential Regulatory Authority

To be fair, they are the only authority to request further evidence "to substantiate my claims". It only took them 2 to 3 years to get around to that. They were "concerned about the safety & security of depositor funds" - to quote.

They also assured me that I would never know the progress or outcome of any investigation - should one even occur.

They are true to their word, surely a victim of fraud deserves better.

Australian Securities & Investments Commission

Even though the conduct of corporations has always been within their jurisdiction, this esteemed defender of the public interest cites "no jurisdiction" in these events - try the ACCC they say.

It seems that a financial, well resourced & aggressive corporation is perfectly entitled to defraud & bankrupt their customer with impunity despite the fact that they have acted in a manner that is predatory, unconscionable & is in breach of many points of settled law.
Insolvency Trustee Service Australia (ITSA) & Bankruptcy Trustees generally

When a bank has a disagreement with their customer, the customer is almost universally bankrupted. This is engineered for the following reasons:

1. Generally a bankrupt business is a PTY LTD company with the owners holding the board positions and acting as executive managers. Their assets secure the business, its operations, loans etc. (The sole trader & partnership suffer the same processes).

2. Once the process as highlighted here begins, the customers find themselves in an insolvent position very quickly. The bank will usually decide that you are no longer welcome as a customer, the purpose in our case, to resolve their liabilities of theft, conversion & conspiracy to defraud us. They will universally withhold those determinations & all information in their possession from you.

3. The process commences in a way that seems incomprehensible to the customer, decisions are made by the banks that have the effect of costing you substantial sums of money despite more effective options being available. In fact the process is designed to maximise your losses. They will renege on previous & recent agreements & promises.

4. Once the bank has decided to liquidate they will do so in extreme haste. In our case, it took five working weeks from the time the Receiver & Manager was appointed, to the signing of the contracts of sale by him on a $1.6m business.

5. As a bankrupt, the customer are now "banned people" in terms of acting on behalf of their own company. The customer (the owner) has no say in the decisions that effect either their own financial position or that of their company in any way whatsoever. Those rights now vest with the Receiver & Manager (generally the banks own appointee) and the Bankruptcy Trustee.

6. Once bankrupt, any & all current or planned litigation is cancelled forthwith.

7. Your entire estate now falls under the control of your bankruptcy trustee, in my case the ITSA.

8. The ITSA are not there to protect the interests of the bankrupt. They are there solely to protect the interests of the bankrupts’ creditors. In my case principally the National Australia Bank.

9. The ITSA will not pursue any legal investigation or legal action unless the creditors agree to fund such an action. It is not difficult to believe that the National Australia Bank will decline an invitation to fund a criminal investigation into their own conduct.

10. The bank are therefore free to concentrate upon their next victim free in the knowledge that in this case their financial, legal & ethical liabilities to their customer are protected, all be it by conspiracy & fraud protected by the very regulators & agencies charged with the mandate to protect the public interest & those of the banks customers.

All in all a very sweet little arrangement don’t you think?
Australian Federal Police

They determined that no federal laws were breached. I mistakenly believed that fraud was a criminal event & that the financial system was part of the Federal jurisdiction – silly me.

I was therefore interested to note an article in the Australian Financial Review (Rachel Leibhen 20/05/2004) headed, "The Australian Federal Police have forged an alliance with banks to crack down on financial fraud by creating a new taskforce of investigators and banking specialists."

Isn't it interesting the difference between "people" defrauding a bank, & a bank defrauding their customer? One it seems is an abomination under "Federal Law," illegal, & under the jurisdiction of the AFP, the other is perfectly reasonable & acceptable. How curious.

The Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions

Will only accept briefs etc from the AFP, ACCC, ASIC &/or APRA. They have neither the will nor the interest in absurd notions of justice for the mere peon – ie, the ordinary citizen with little or no financial means or political influence.

The Legal Industry

I have attempted to gain legal advice & it generally follows the following format:

1. The first half hour they will listen to the overview of events.
2. They then ask the questions
   a. How much money do you have?
   b. What assets do you have?
   c. What liabilities do you have?
3. The answer to all in my case is ZERO I am a recently discharged bankrupt – their answer is goodbye.

This of course assumes that they are not held on retainer by the banking industry, if they are then another unsavory dynamic has been known to appear.

You can understand this through the sordid legal practitioner & they do exist, they have a business to run, a wife & children, vehicles, the dog & the cat to feed; – & don’t forget the budgie. It is difficult to expect anyone to devote a large slice of their life to a contest that firstly compromises their commercial relationships with the financial sector; secondly, a contest that is unlikely to succeed in the courts. Why is it unlikely to succeed?

Precedent: National Australia Bank v Idoport Pry Ltd NSW Supreme Court (Mr Justice Einstein 2002) Idoport's case was dismissed in favour of the National Australia Bank:

1. Not because Idoport failed to prove their case.
2. Not because the National Australia Bank proved that they had no case to answer.
3. It was dismissed because Idoport ran out of money. They failed to produce to the court a further $1.5 million as security for costs.

This case ran for 222 court days at an estimated cost of $70 million. Even though the judge stated that the case was in its infancy, & that the Idoport evidence at that point in time had not been heard, the case was dismissed.
Who in this country then can afford to take on a bank in the legal jurisdiction when sums like this & this rationale are involved? Justice has no place at this table.

Can anyone see why such importance must be placed upon a functioning, diligent & effective regulatory & legal process, for investigating & controlling such excesses & criminal behaviour by these huge predatory & well-financed corporations?

To the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Victoria

So Sir, here we are looking at a system from the viewpoint of the mere poor - me, the average citizen that has been the target of a major corporation in such fraudulent events. Such an unequal contract this is.

With legal advice out of my reach, I have made several attempts to bring this conduct to the attention of the Victorian Supreme Court on my own account. Having no legal training (other than half a dozen episodes of Perry Mason in the 60's), my "forth" attempts have been met by the Senior Master Equity Division, as "being an abuse of the Court process".

It seems to me that justice is merely a product bought & sold by those with the wealth, influence & power to manipulate the system. Court systems are merely the auction house doling out those favours to the highest bidder.

As a nation that prides itself upon the notion of a fair go for all, it is paramount that absolute respect & confidence be held in the Judiciary & the Court Systems of this country, without if we descend into chaos & the law of the jungle. That respect & confidence is declared when atrocities such as these events can happen because one party has the financial means & legal expertise to enforce their illegal activities in those same courts.

This notion of who we are as Australians was fought for by ordinary people of my fathers & grandfathers generations, many of whom died in that fight: they did not fight for this the big corporate view of "dog eat dog is all that matters", I do believe that ethics, equity, honesty, integrity & respect for fellow citizens & the law came into that equation somewhere.

So, the resulting view of Justice for the average citizen

We may well have a system of Law in this country, but under no circumstances can it ever be perceived as a system of Justice. Fraud at this level, in this scope & scale cannot live without the protection, collusion &/or co-operation of all those in responsible positions charged with the protection of the public interest. Whether this protection is overt or covert, active or passive, or by way of sheer indifference is irrelevant, the end result remains precisely the same.

I am not challenging the National Australia Bank's right to hold a banking licence; the conduct of the National Australia Bank directly challenges this banks right & fitness to hold Company Registration in this country.

If the natural person, the flesh & blood citizen is required to live ethically & within the law, why then is the corporate citizen not subject to the same responsibility? They are after all given the privilege of "licence" to operate as a natural person, to enjoy the same rights & freedoms as us - the natural person.

Why then do the responsible authorities & the courts accept their perception that their only responsibility is to maximise the profit for the shareholder to the exclusion of all else?

It appears that a corporate decision to obey any law is merely a business decision determined by the profitability of that situation. Why then are they entitled to act not just in breach of, but often above & beyond the law?
So when may I ask does the law stop being the law & lose its relevance?
Does one's resolute intent to act illegally coupled with one's massive financial means determine:
1. When the law applies to them?
2. When a regulatory or investigative authority takes reasonable action?

Is Justice solely dependent upon one's capacity to pay the piper?

Ladies & Gentlemen I decided long ago that whilst I must accept the reality of these events, I cannot and will never accept a bank's perceived right to steal from & systematically defraud their customers, nor do they have the right to destroy their customers' financial security for that bank's profit.

The fundamental issues of this case are greater than what has happened to my partners & I; we are but one unfortunate story amongst others. The fundamental issues here directly confront the safety & security of depositors' funds (your money in your bank account) & should rightfully question this bank's fitness, competence, ethical capacity & right to hold the privileges of ASC Company registration in this country, let alone to hold a banking licence.

Therefore, if you the protectors of the public interest will not uphold your duties, responsibilities, and your mandate & refuse to protect the public interest, then I shall at least attempt to do your job for you; however clumsy, inconvenient or unwelcome that may be.

Yours in the forlorn quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

Paul Buckman

I am reminded of a quotation (origin unknown by me)

"For evil to triumph it takes good men to do nothing".

A note of caution: If a multinational corporation can behave in this illegal manner with impunity and destroy the financial viability of an ordinary citizen for its own profit & protection, what makes you think that you have the capacity to "discuss" let alone "negotiate" anything with these enterprises.

Your choice is "take-it or leave-it" – beware the new Industrial Relations Laws.

In light of recent legislation before the Federal Parliament my actions here may well by now be sedulous, I'm sure that one of our "noble defenders" of the public good will advise me, after all I am but a mere peon of this society, a citizen, an easy target.

PEON n. [India, Spanish America, Australia (new)]; day labourer, enslaved debtor, uneducated rural worker, worthless person, a person of little commercial value or consequence, one who conducts business with a bank as a "customer".

29th of September 2004,

National Australia Bank

Dear John,

Please forgive my tardiness in not welcoming you to your position earlier than this, however I have been busy – but welcome anyway.

I am well aware of your staff as the attachments will attest & this letter is designed to bring you up to speed with the current status of our dispute, & despite James & Litch’s dictum (letter attached) that your file is closed – my file is not – in fact it is rapidly growing. I have in recent times (the past 5 years) sought redress from the National Australia Bank to no avail. In spite of this & as a matter of courtesy to you, I am offering you the opportunity to resolve these outstanding issues. That assumes that you are a man of ethics & integrity, as opposed to a mere banker. Given the conduct of your bank in these matters to date, one could reasonably be excused for believing that an “ethical banker of integrity” is an oxymoron. This document & attachments are delivered without prejudice.

The Background

In short form, my partners & I ran a small business in Bairnsdale (East Gippsland) from 1982 called Basstech Pty Ltd at 066 015 301 – your customer. Basstech, after a period of redevelopment was growing at an average 3-year rate of 39% per annum (1995 – 1999). In December 1997 we were on target to gross $1,000,000 in invoiced earnings & this was exceeded. As we were beginning to handle substantial sums of money, we the Directors decided that to maintain financial credibility & the confidence of our creditors & bankers that we needed to have a “Chartered Accountant” as our internal financial controller. The person we chose was the accountant that had assisted us with the business redevelopment program over the previous four years. At that time he was the Bairnsdale branch manager for the Public Accounting Practice (Phillipson Fletcher of Sale Vic). A practice that we had used for some years, I personally had used them for around 20 years for business & personal matters. In Oct 1997, he (Harry) was looking for a change from public practice. Unbeknownst to us, but explicitly known to our Accountants at that time, was that Harry was a chronic gambling addict.

In Dec 1997 Harry joined Basstech. The earliest theft (uncovered during the Police Investigation) began in March 1998, he stole company funds by forging signatures on cheques:

- There were 184 cheques involved in the fraud,
- Of these 152 involved forged signatures,
- Of these 55 were explicitly referred to your National Australia Bank manager by other bankers for explicit signature verification and clearance.

The total funds stolen was $234,400, the total funds removed from our bank account under forged signatures was $284,750. The discrepancy being that not all cheques bearing forged signatures were stolen funds as Harry did forge some signatures to pay legitimate creditors. Reference to this case, The Queen v Brendan James Harry, County Court Melbourne 1st of October 2001, Judge White.

The issue here is the misconduct of the National Australia Bank in the conduct of the original fraud and the subsequent unconscionable & criminal conduct in your banks endeavours to limit liability in these same matters.
The issues concerning the National Australia Bank.

The National Australia Bank has 146 years experience in banking. As bankers you should be well aware of the legislation and settled law as it applies to your industry & operations that is assuming. In spite of recent reports & judgements, that you are “Diligent & Prudent bankers”. Your bank has acted contrary to the “perceived” & expected conduct and culture of the Professional Person and the diligent & prudent banker.

What the National Australia Bank has in effect done here is:

- From cheques referred to your account manager by other bankers, your bank grossed on at least 35 separate occasions, cheques bearing forged signatures yet your bank continued to honour those cheques without question.
- Having detected criminal activity, knowingly surrender the bank’s money to a thief then re-assign responsibility for the bank’s conduct to Banstech in the form of “Overdraft money” the value of which ultimately represented 25% of your annual receipts as shown by your bank’s monthly statement of account (1998/1999).
- Then, in addition, charged Banstech in excess of $21,000 in overdraft interest & fees on that money removed illegally without our mandate.
- The compound effect of these actions placed Banstech in an insolvent condition.
- Whilst “knowing” that your bank had substantial liability in the underlying events, The National Australia Bank attempted to create a more favourable position for itself by formalising an “unofficial” overdraft into a formal loan under guarantee and the “Registered Debenture” held over Banstech by your bank, thereby ensuring your priority over assets. I believe that these and all other guarantees given to the National Australia Bank became void at that time by reason of the principles expressed by the High Court of Australia in COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA LTD. v. AMADO (1983) 151 CLR 447; & reinforced in The National Australia Bank v Voloshin (2000) NSWSC 84 (25 Feb 2000).

The National Australia Bank made an express misrepresentation that induced the Directors of Banstech to enter into those guarantees. That misrepresentation included but is not limited to the National Australia Bank’s withholding of relevant information pertaining to facts surrounding that fraud and the National Australia Bank’s collusion in that fraud.

- Whilst “knowing” that the National Australia Bank had substantial liability in the antecedent events, Your bank then used that insolvent condition as the justification to appoint the receiver & manager to liquidate our business & assets.
- Whilst “knowing” that the National Australia Bank had substantial liability in the antecedent events your bank then forced us the directors & shareholders to personal bankruptcy, in order to remove from us all financial & legal capacity to challenge your bank’s dishonest, unremediable and criminal conduct, thereby cancelling any proposed litigation and removing our legal capacity to act on behalf of Banstech.
- This was done before the Police investigation was concluded and while the evidence collected was still under investigation and “sub judice” thereby restricting/ removing our capacity to legally defend ourselves.
- Your bank knowingly used this “legal” strategy to remove our capacity to hold the bank to account thereby protecting the banks interest; and is a conspiracy to defraud your customer, your customers creditors & perpetuating the course of justice.

It also needs to be said that your banks receiver & manager (Paul Burness of Scott Partners, Malvern Victoria) conspired with the National Australia Bank in that he Burness:

- In defiance of settled law, refused to hold a creditors meeting or consider any other creditors interest save that of “this appointor” — the National Australia Bank.
- Refused to comply with Corporations Law, The ASIC Act and the statutory obligations of a Receiver & Manager by protecting the interests of one creditor (the National Australia Bank) in preference to all others including the interest of the Commonwealth.

Refused to investigate the banks conduct and collusion with a thief in the fraud against Basitech particularly as the National Australia Bank were his appointees.

Consented with the bank to act against the interests of Basitech and acting contrary to law and legal precedent – In Freeman v National Australia Bank Ltd [2002] FCA 427 (28 April 2002);

SPENDER J said at [5] “It has been said that the receiver & manager is the agent of the mortgagee (in Basitech the directors & shareholders), not the agent of the bank” (whether or not he was appointed by the bank). It is obvious from correspondence between Burnas & myself that reality and commercial custom differs from judicial and legal perception.

Consented with the National Australia Bank in negotiating with your bank to act as your Receiver & Manager whilst still acting in the capacity of Basitech’s professional financial adviser, in that he attended meetings between the National Australia Bank and Basitech’s Managing Director, where he participated in negotiations on Basotech behalf. At the final meeting he commenced direct negotiations on his own behalf to act as your Receiver & Manager in the presence of the Basitech Managing Director.

This is not a trivial matter and direct breaches of law are involved. Those breaches involve on the part of your bank, its staff and your appointed receiver & manager:
1. Theft;
2. Collusion;
3. Conversion;
4. Conspiracy to defraud;
5. Being an accessory to fraud before, during & after the fact.
6. The potential for Tax evasion

I suggest to you that these issues are by no means "foreign concepts" to the National Australia Bank given your public statements on your release of the recent PWC report; and, the Investigators Report and the judgement of the High Court of the Republic of Ireland (2004). You will also be aware that the National Australia Bank has been under investigation in the USA under the Sarbanes-Oxley rules and reportedly been investigated for tax evasion in both Australia & New Zealand recently and penalties have been imposed. So I expect that you should agree that criminal conduct on the part of this bank & its employees across the globe is by no means unusual; it is ingrained & structural.

John, I advise you now that I intend to force legislative changes & that protection be invoked for small businesses against the predatory conduct engaged in by your bank & industry. I also intend to see Managers, Senior Managers & Directors of your bank gaol'd over the criminal conduct engaged in by the staff & divisions under their control & stewardship commencing with Craig Hunter & your Asset-Back Structuring Unit, current Directors, & your former Directors Ciutto & Allen.

In the past I have encouraged Ciutto, & now you too are encouraged to prosecute me for libel & defamation over these statements should they be false. For that purpose I have enclosed a Petition for distribution to your staff & shareholders. It is in the interests of your staff to defend their reputation as diligent & prudent bankers of integrity, & it is in your shareholders interests to defend their integrity & reputation as ethical investors. This & other documents form part of document sets & statements publicly released & circulated by me & I promise to meet to that fact should you wish to prosecute me – guilty your honour. I shall of course revel in the opportunity to present my case.

Yours in the forever quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

Mr. Frank Cicitto, Managing Director

MELBOURNE 3000

Reference: James Litt (Basstech Pty Ltd aen 006 035 301)

Dear Sir,

Notwithstanding the determination of James Litt (no less) letter attached, you are invited to assist me.

Please find attached a brochure that if false is at the very least libellous and defamatory in nature, as is most other material & documents that I have expressly sent to you. The attached brochure is in support of a Royal Commission into the fraudulent & criminal conduct of this bank and the banking industry in general, as well as the regulators that “supposedly” regulate this industry & in criminal terms, “prosecute” breaches of law. I would expect that you would not support such a petition.

However, I am also circulating “Petition # 2” which you may wish to support, & I encourage you to do so. To that end I formally request that you circulate this brochure & petition (attached) to both your staff & your shareholders, so that they may join this petition & see “justice” done, that is should my statements be false.

In any events in this regard I am experiencing little resistance in collecting signatures for either petition. When National Australia Bank shareholders have identified themselves, I make the point that joining Petition #2 is directly in their interests as not to do so is a slight upon their ethics and their “ethical” investments.

There has to be a better way.

Yours in the fervent quest for the insertion of ethics, equity, fairness, honesty, integrity and justice in the banking system.

Paul Backman

Ce The Hon. Peter McGauran, Member for Gippsland.

Dear Mr Buckman,

I refer to your letter dated 5th January 2002 addressed to the Managing Director, who has asked that I respond on his behalf. Please accept my apology for the delay in this response.

I have had a chance to review the lending file for Basstech Pty Ltd. I note in the letter from ITSA dated 30/6/2000, they indicate that contained within your Statement of Affairs was an expectation of compensation from the Bank in relation to “fraudulent acts committed in respect of the Basstech companies of which [you were] formerly a director”. In response to this letter, the Bank advised that it had, and would cooperate with any sanctioned and legitimate criminal investigation undertaken by the Victorian Police Force.

The Bank’s file of Basstech Pty Ltd has been closed and accordingly no further correspondence will be forthcoming.

Yours faithfully,

James Litt

Petition

To the Chairman of the Board & the Managing Director of the National Australia Bank.

The following citizens of Australia &/or customers of Australian Banking Institutions draw your attention to documents (example - Explanatory Note #5) & other brochures circulating in the public domain (of which Mr Frank Cicinato is patently aware); documents that are at face value grossly defamatory and libellous to the National Australia Bank.

Therefore, Should those documents & comments be false, your petitioners request that the National Australia Bank “prosecute” the author Mr Paul Alan Backman of Tinamba Vic in a Court of LAW for libel and defamation to protect the good name of the bank and the Australian Banking Industry.

Dear Sir,

As a matter of courtesy you will find attached a copy of my submission to the Banking Industry Ombudsman regarding the issue of theft, criminal conspiracy and conversion by the National Australia Bank against Bassettech Pty Ltd acn 006 035 391.

You may wish to consider your conduct further. Should you choose to show me the courtesy of acknowledging this correspondence then that would be unusual but welcome.

There has to be a better way.

Sir,

I refer to inaccuracies in your reply to the Hon Philip R. Davis MP on the 12th of May 2003. I will attend to each inaccuracy in turn.

1. Para 2 - Mr Buckman makes serious allegations against the Bank amounting to “theft” of funds belonging to Bassetech Pty Ltd by a former employee of Bassetech Pty Ltd.

   The Melbourne County Court has dealt with the matter of theft by a former employee on the 1st of October 2001. The fellow was convicted and sentenced to two years & nine months in prison, that issue has been resolved - successfully.

   The issue of theft, collusion & fraud by the bank & its staff has not been addressed in any form. Refer to Explanatory Note 55 for an outline of the issues that exist.

2. Para 2 - The bank has attempted to discuss these matters with Mr Buckman.

   The National Australia Bank at no time has attempted to discuss or address these issues noted in the attached Explanatory Note 55, and at this point in time refuse to acknowledge my existence let alone correspondence. James B Litt (no less) expressed this in writing on the 23rd of January 2003 – refer page 7 of the attached Explanatory Note.

3. Para 3 – Legal recourse and the other nonsense noted.

   You & I both know the basis of your strategies when it comes to legal action against the National Australia Bank. They are there for all to see in the case of IDSPORT Pty Ltd (John Macdonald) in the NSW Supreme Court before Justice Einstein.

   I expect that you will also choose to ignore this correspondence as well.

Yours in the former quest for ethics, equity, fairness, honesty, integrity and justice in the banking system.

Dear Mr Buckman

Re: National Australia Bank and Basstech Pty Ltd

Reference is made to your visit to my electorate office on 24 April 2003, where you raised further concerns relating to the conduct of the National Australia Bank in relation to Basstech Pty Ltd.

Representation was made on your behalf to the Chief Executive Officer of the National Australia Bank, Mr Frank Cicutto, and the response, from the Executive of Credit Restructuring for Victoria and Tasmania, Mr Rick Drury, is enclosed.

It is evident from this correspondence that the National Australia Bank contends any claims made in relation to Basstech should be made by the appropriate party due to the company’s de-registration status. Furthermore, as a bankrupt, any claims you may have in relation to your personal estate should be made by the Trustee in Bankruptcy.

As a Member of Parliament I believe I have exhausted any means of making representation on your behalf. I can only recommend that there is no other course to determine this matter other than to take civil action through the courts.

I regret that this matter has concluded this way.

Yours sincerely

Dear Sir,

Basstech Pty Ltd (In liquidation) (deregistered)

I refer to your letters dated 3 March and 4 May 2003 and the claims made by Paul Buckman against National Australia Bank Limited.

Mr Buckman makes serious allegations against the bank amounting to “theft” of funds belonging to Basstech Pty Ltd by a former employee of Basstech Pty Ltd. The bank has attempted to discuss these matters with Mr Buckman.

We note that Basstech Pty Ltd has been deregistered and any claims made in relation to it should be made by the appropriate party. In the same manner, Mr Buckman is a bankrupt and any claims that he may have in relation to his personal estate should be made by the Trustee in Bankruptcy.

We would recommend that Mr Buckman seek independent legal advice on the claims made.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Mr Buckman,

I refer to your letter dated 5th January 2002 addressed to the Managing Director, who has asked that I respond on his behalf. Please accept my apology for the delay in this response.

I have had a chance to review the lending file for Basstech Pty Ltd. I note that in a letter from ITSA dated 30/6/2000, they indicate that contained within your Statement of Affairs was an expectation of compensation from the Bank in relation to "fraudulent acts committed in respect of the Basstech companies of which [you were] formerly a director".

In response to this letter, the Bank advised that it had, and would cooperate with any sanctioned and legitimate criminal investigation undertaken by the Victorian Police Force.

The Bank’s file of Basstech Pty Ltd has been closed and accordingly no further correspondence will be forthcoming.

Dear Sir/ Madam,

I am in receipt of your letter dated the 29th of May 2000, received yesterday the 3rd of June. Am I to understand that you (the National Australia Bank) are not confined by notions as “Duty of Care”, “Due Diligence” or other such ethical or legal niceties.

The above company monies (held in trust by you) were transferred to other entities without any displayed duty of care or reference to any notion of due diligence.

As a consequence of your iniquity & incompetence, I consider that I am no longer bound to honor any indemnities or guarantee’s given by me in your favor. Should you have another opinion, then I am sure you will advise me of that. If that includes legal action, then I expect you to advise me of the date, Court location and grounds for that legal action.

Once again I make this offer, should you wish to preview the evidence referred to by me in previous correspondence with a view to reasonable negotiation taking place between us, I would be pleased to approach the Victoria Police Investigating Officer for approval to do this, subject to his conditions. a.c.n 006 035 301(receiver & manager appointed)

Dear Sir/Madam,

As you well know, the failure of the above company was caused by the fraudulent activity of an employee (our accountant) in that he is accused of stealing considerable sums of money. I have been working closely with the Victoria Police Investigating Officer and my evidence is now complete. The expectation is that numerous charges will soon be laid.

This evidence strongly suggests that had the National Australia Bank performed any semblance of "Due Diligence" in the clearance of cheques & funds through the Banstech account, this fraudulent activity would have become known in both of us as early as April 1998.

The effect of the NAB’s negligence was to aid & abet this fraud.

An explanation as to the Banks conduct & clearance processes in this matter is demanded again.

(Previously requested in my letter of the 9th of November 1999 to “The Manager NAB, Ballarat Branch & replied to by Ross Blakeley of your office on the 23rd of November 1999. Requested again on the 16th of March 2000 in a letter to Craig Hunter and now to you on the 30th of May 2000.)

At this point, I have a large body of evidence to substantiate my statements, however, I am not in a position to make use of it. Should I do so:

1. It would provide grounds for the accused in this fraud to go free on the grounds “he could not get a fair trial”, or, due to the inadmissibility of evidence due to the contamination of that evidence.
2. I would also be in the position of being in contempt of court.
3. I could then sue the Vic areas of the Victoria Police for wasting their valuable time, which is in itself an offence.

So, at this point you have me at an extreme disadvantage—I cannot defend myself in this action.
I am also aware of your view that any correspondence about this evidence with you (the Bank) & Paul A. Burness (Receiver Manager) to date is considered "Pure conjecture", "Inexact" and "Unsubstantiated rumour". At this point you may be legally correct (or ethically or morally).

My Conjecture, Inexact & rumour form the "core evidence" in the criminal case against the accused. On the conviction & sentencing of this person, "MY Conjecture, Inexact & rumour"

1. Become "Fact" proven in a "Criminal Court of Australia".
2. Accepted in Court as "undeniable", after all there will be a fellow sentenced as a direct result of these "Facts".

At this point I will also be released from all legal & evidentiary restrictions. Furthermore, I will be in a position to use this evidence - these facts, as, when & in whatever forum I deem appropriate.

I also wish to advise that I am seeking the advice of a QC as to whether there is sufficient evidence to prevent the laying of charges against the National Australia Bank, its officers at South Melbourne and Balmain (including Matthew Johnson) for criminal negligence, aiding & abetting &/or other misconduct.

Should you wish to preview this evidence with a view to reasonable negotiation taking place between us, I would be pleased to approach the Victorian Police Investigating Officer for approval to do this, subject to his conditions. You may contact me directly on 0407 853 448.

Dear Sir,

As a courtesy I promptly advise receipt of your letter dated the 14th of March, I received it this morning (Saturday the 18th of March 2000), I confirm receipt of:

1. A "Summary Declaration";
2. A statement of sorts relating to general income & expenditure categories from the receiver manager;
3. An identification of the account numbers and sums you are demanding repayment of.

Sir, to date you are demanding repayment for an amount of $382,117.56 (according to your above mentioned letter), yet you refuse to provide me with any meaningful information upon which to base an adequate response in resolution of this matter. Sir you have not

1. With reference to the income & expenditure living from the receiver manager. This situation lists me in no way satisfies the requirement for adequate information, however there are questions that do arise here:
   - Where does the $49,000 distribution reflect in the sums you are demanding from me?
   - What is the resultant value of the "Loss" of Biositech? Where are these sums reflected in your claim against me?
   - What sums has the receiver manager kept for his purposes?
   - When am I to receive a proper set of accounts for this process?
2. You will be aware that this event was caused by the fraudulent activity of an employee. I have nearly completed my investigations into this matter and I expect to present the evidence to the Victorian Police no charges can be laid.
3. The evidence strongly suggests that had the National Australia Bank performed any semblance of "Due Diligence" in the clearance of cheques & funds through the thousand accounts, then this fraudulent activity would have become known to both of us as early as April 1993. An explanation as to the bank's conduct & clearance processes in this matter is now demanded (as previously requested in my letter of the 9th of November 1999 to "The Manager
 N.D. Bankside Branch & replied to by Ross Buhkley of your office on the 30th of November 1999).

At our meeting at your office on the 15th of February, we agreed that I would respond with a considered proposal within 14 days of receipt of the necessary information my advisors & I need to formulate such a response. The bank, still, to date has not provided the necessary information. Should you wish to modify this outline, then I should be pleased to comply with the agreement I made with you.

(Receiver and Manager Appointed)

I refer to your letter dated 9 November, 1999.

Your queries regarding the Bank’s processes and examples of transactions which have occurred are considered general and vague.

The Bank is willing to co-operate with any sanctioned and legitimate criminal investigation by the appropriate authorities, in this case the Victoria Police.

In this regard, I have spoken directly to Detective Senior Constable Bruce Sharp of the Bairnsdale CIB, whom has confirmed that the Bank has been entirely co-operative and compliant in this matter.

Further, should you be aware of any error or impropriety by the Bank in negotiating any specific transaction, please advise.

With respect to your query regarding penalty interest rates, the Bank’s position in this matter has been adequately detailed in my facsimile dated 14 September, 1999 to Alan Sampson.

Please note that responsibility for this matter rests with the Asset Structuring Unit. Accordingly, any queries or requests for information should be directed there.

Yours faithfully

Dear Sir or Madam:

Further to our advice of the 21st of May 1999, to your account manager Mr Matthew Johnson, that "the company" had suffered an incidence of alleged fraud perpetuated by our accountant Mr. Brendan J. Barty. We advised that we had requested the Victoria Police to investigate this event. We confirm that the investigation is continuing, and the investigating officer is Detective Senior Constable Bruce Sharp of the Braeside CIB.

You will be aware that as part of the investigation, a warrant was issued for the return of cheques written against the above account. We note that the Bank has not surrendered all of the cheques sought. As directors of "the company" we have been assisting the Police with their enquiries & in particular, verifying the cheque payees' destination, clearance of funds & other issues including obvious fraudulent signatures & other irregularities.

As a director of "the company" I request your response to the following:

1. What process does the National Australia Bank employ to validate that legal authority does exist to conduct a funds transfer from a "customer account"?

2. If a clearance process exists, please detail what that process entails.

3. If there is a particular process required to transfer funds as "cash". What is that process?

4. Under what circumstances are duplicate "cheque number ranges" issued?

Cheques in the range 6900's have been cleared through our account in Jun to Aug 1997 & again in Mar 1999 for differing amounts. Refer the table below as an example of two instances:

5.1. Fax from Alan Snowdon (Managing Director of "the company") to Ross Blakeley (National Australia Bank) re: the retention of liquid assets of "the company".

5.2. The reply from Ross Blakeley.

5.3. The letter from Matthew Johnson re: interest rate increases.

Question: If the NAB have been removing repayment funds from the liquid assets in the above account, how then is the rate increase justified?

If repayment are being deducted as you claim as your right, then surely the account is not in arrears & therefore it is not appropriate to move the interest rate to "penalty rates".

The Director(s) of "the company" are eager to resolve its legal position in relation to the above matters as soon as possible. We request a written response within seven (7) days of the date of this letter. I may be contacted for further information on 0419 307 934.

Yours faithfully,

RE: BASSTECH PTY LTD
(RECEIVER AND MANAGER APPOINTED)

I refer to your facsimile dated 9 September, 1999 and respond on a "Without Prejudice" basis.

I confirm that pursuant to the terms of the Registered Mortgage Debenture held by the Bank over the assets and undertaking of Basstech Pty Ltd, together with the Bank’s right of set off/amalgamation of accounts, the Bank is able to:

1. set off credit funds held at the date of appointment of the Receiver against other outstanding facilities. This right of set off is in priority to other claims on floating charge assets; and
2. continue to charge interest on monies outstanding in accordance with the terms of the facility agreements executed between the Bank and Basstech Pty Ltd. The priority afforded to the Bank would be in accordance with the existing Registered Mortgage Debenture and Corporations Law.

From information provided by the Receiver and Manager, the above issues would appear to be academic as it is expected (however not guaranteed) that sufficient funds will be realised from floating charge assets (debtors and stock) to discharge in full the estimated employee entitlements. This will in particular depend on the revocability of debtors.

Should you dispute the above, you should seek your own independent legal advice.

Dear Ross,

I wish to express my concern regarding the NAB’s action in refusing to transfer Basstech’s credit balance to the Receiver & Manager at the time of his appointment. These were our trading funds, received from debtor payments, and as such should be deemed as liquid assets of the Company.

I would be particularly interested in the legal position should these funds not become available for the payment of staff entitlements.

Equally interesting is the fact that the NAB is withdrawing interest payments from these accounts post appointment of the Receiver. Does the NAB have priority over other creditors? Is this legal?

I look forward to your response.

Kind Regards,
Alan Sampson.

COMMENTS OF RECEIVER & MANAGER ON REPORT AS TO AFFAIRS
PURSUANT TO SECTION 429(2)(e) OF THE CORPORATIONS LAW

I was appointed Receiver & Manager of the above company on 20 August 1999 pursuant to the provisions contained in a registered debenture charge created by the company in favour of National Australia Bank.

I make the following comments in relation to the Report as to Affairs of the company as at 20 August 1999 and submitted to me by Alan Sampson on 11 October 1999.

1. The directors have failed to provide details of Plant & Equipment on the annexure inventory.
2. The directors have included as assets subject to specific charges various creditors that should be disclosed as balances owing to partly secured creditors and detailed in Schedule G.
3. The directors have included amounts owing to themselves in Schedule E, which have no priority and should be included as unsecured creditors.
4. The directors have included amounts owing for tax installment deductions as priority creditors, which should be included as unsecured creditors.

I have no further comments to make at this stage, but reserve the right to make further comments in the future should the need arise.

DATED this 28th day of October 1999.

ACN: 006 035 301

I refer to previous communications in relation to this matter and particularly your advice that the company has an action against the National Australia Bank.

I have now sought legal advice in relation to this matter and have been advised:

1. That I cannot take an action against the Bank as they are my appointor.
2. That you as Directors should obtain your own independent advice in relation to this matter and particularly whether you have the capacity to institute such an action, should one exist.

In relation to any action against Mr Harty or his insurer, I am currently investigating the commercial benefits of pursuing same and will advise you of the outcome in due course.

Any information you are able to provide me in relation to:

1. The action itself.
2. The financial position of Mr Harty or any insurance policies he holds would be appreciated.

Dear Ken,

After careful consideration of your request to be signatories to the Basstech sale agreement as presented to us, both Elke and myself must decline the opportunity to be a part of the deal. The sale price is an insult to our 18 years of involvement with Basstech and does nothing to alleviate our financial burden. We certainly do not agree with or concur with these sale conditions.

As a director and shareholder of the above company, I cannot agree to the conditions of sale as advised by fax of the 28th of September 1999 at 17:08 hours.

My reasons for this refusal are that I believe the stated price under values the company, & more importantly the issues identified in my fax to you last Friday re the retrieval of funds & compensation issues still unaddressed.

Dear Sir,

Basotech Pty Ltd (Receiver & Manager appointed) A.C.N. 006 035 001 ("The Company")

Further to our fax from Alan Sampson of the 9th of September 1999, and your reply of the 23rd of September 1999.

As you are aware, on the 19th of August 1999 the directors of the company requested that the National Australia Bank appoint a Receiver and Manager to the company because of the financial position of the company. This was done after seeking advice from you (on a sample letter as provided by Scott Partners). You were appointed receiver manager of the company on the 20th of August 1999.

The financial position of the company is directly attributable to the misappropriation of company funds by the company’s accountant, Brendan Harty. We have referred the matter to the Victoria Police for investigation into the activities of Mr. Harty and we understand that he is expected to be charged with criminal offences in relation to this misappropriation. We are aware that the National Australia Bank has processed company cheques without proper authorisation from the company as the cheques contain forged signatures & other irregularities.

It appears that the company is in a position to recover its losses by immediately commencing civil legal action against Mr Harty, his professional indemnity insurer and/or the National Australia Bank.

As we are not in a position to instruct solicitors on behalf of the company to investigate the liability of Mr. Harty and/or the National Australia Bank we ask that you appoint solicitors for such purpose. Alternatively we ask that you authorise us to engage solicitors on behalf of the company to investigate and advise the company in relation to the matter and make funds available for that purpose.

Yours faithfully

Re: Basitech Pty Ltd abn 006 635 391

Dear Sir,

I decided long ago that whilst I must accept the reality of the fraudulent events conducted against Basitech and previously raised with you, I cannot and will never accept that one section of society (“a person”) has a legitimate, legal & unscrupulous right to defraud another section of society (“another person”). Given that a corporation is a “person” before the law in precisely the same way and to the same extent as I am a person before the law.

The fundamental issues of this case are greater than what has happened to Basitech, my partners & I; we are but one unfortunate story amongst others. The fundamental issues here directly concern the safety & security of depositors’ funds (your money in your bank account) & should rightfully question this bank’s fitness, competence, ethical capacity & right to hold the privilege of ASIC Company registrations in this country, let alone to hold a banking licence.

Therefore, it is my express intention to visit your Melbourne offices in the very near future to personally demand answers as to why you refuse to investigate these incidents of fraud. Should you prove to me where & how my stand is so wrong then I will be exceptionally grateful for that; because then I can put everything to rest with ease. This is not a polite request; I demand to know why you persistently refuse to investigate these most serious incidents of fraud.

My stand, as inconvenient or unwelcome as that may be, is in- negotiable. You have a choice, you can either provide those answers personally, or on the other hand you could have me arrested for trespassing and answer those questions in a public arena, but answer them you will.

At the end of the day your inaction & refusal to investigate and prosecute has had the effect of transforming what is criminal conduct by a major corporation into “a right of passage”. Find attached a copy of my recent correspondence with the National Australia Bank.

Yours in the fondest quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

Dear Mr Buckman

NATIONAL AUSTRALIA BANK LIMITED (ACN 004 044 937) (NAB)

I refer to your letter of 29 September 2003, in relation to the above.

During your lengthy correspondence with ASIC, you have expressed the view that NAB contributed to the collapse of Basotech Pty Ltd (ACN 006 035 301) (Basotech) a now deregistered company of which you were director.

As discussed previously, ASIC is not able to take further action in respect of your concerns in relation to NAB. Although NAB's involvement in Basotech's demise may cause you considerable offence, it does not appear to offend any legislation administered by ASIC. As a result, there is no basis for any regulatory intervention by ASIC here.

Please be aware that although ASIC is not able to investigate your concerns in this instance, this does not prevent you from pursuing civil remedies otherwise available to you. Your legal adviser can provide you with more information about other options that may be open to you, should you wish to pursue this matter privately.

Additionally, should you feel dissatisfied with ASIC's decision in relation to your complaint, you may choose to raise your concerns with the Commonwealth Ombudsman. The Ombudsman's role is to investigate complaints in relation to the actions of Commonwealth departments and authorities such as ASIC. The Ombudsman may be contacted at:

Dear Sir,

Given our phone discussion of the 26th of March 2003 you will understand my total disappointment with your letter of the 31st of March 2003. This disappointment is compounded by the fact that ASIC investigators have made no attempt to quantify &/or obtain additional evidence from others or myself.

I note that there are difficulties here, & that I am in effect challenging the National Australia Bank’s “right & fitness” to hold a Banking &/or financial institutions licence in Australia or anywhere else in the world for that matter. I fully comprehend what I am asking for.

What the National Australia Bank has done here is in contravention of the law. I draw your attention to further correspondence from me on the subject in a letter of the 2nd of March 2003, this letter asked specific questions regarding the National Australia Bank’s conduct in light of specific Acts of Parliament. Included with this letter were Explanatory notes 1 to 5 inclusive. Make no mistake, in distribution set # 1 I have effectively charged the National Australia Bank with:

- Duplicity in Fraud, being an accessory before, during and after the fact in that they first detected signature anomalies on the 1st of May 1998. They chose to ignore those criminal acts and clear those funds without reference to us their depositors. One cannot obtain “value” from your bank account without the explicit collaboration of your bank through their clearance process.
- Illegally withholding funds obtained by fraudulent means in contravention of the Cheques Act 1986 in the form of “not negotiable cheques” made payable to cash.
- Charging for services not provided whilst knowing that they had no capacity to provide those services, to wit basic signature authentication and due diligence.
- Theft and conversion.
- “They conspired to pervert the course of justice “ by using that imposed insolvent condition (that they knowingly facilitated) as the trigger to enact the provisions of the Debenture they held over our company to appoint a receiver & manager, to liquidate our business and assets. In addition they conspired to pervert the course of justice by forcing my partners & I to bankruptcy to remove from us any possible capacity to mount a challenge, and to mask their incompetence, ineptitude and liability in these matters.

There are real issues of concern to every bank customer here particularly small business customers. If you operate a “Cheque Facility” then you are using precisely the same banking product as we did. What has happened to us can happen to every other account holder.
Page #2 - Response to ASIC’s refusal to investigate

I beg your indulgence to consider the following as I attempt to answer some of the points at issue from your letter.

1. I was afforded the courtesy of an interview with the Banking Ombudsman’s Office & I was shown every courtesy. The Officer was very keen to extol the virtues of his office. However this issue is larger that their imposed limitation ($100,000) so too bad so sad I will have to take it to court – they are unable to assist. To pay my companies’ unsecured creditors & walk away with $0.30 in my pocket, I would need a settlement of around $1,000,000 plus $1.

2. I at least thank you for not referring to my statements as “allegations”, because this is very much a matter of criminal conduct and perverting the course of justice by the National Australia Bank. I allege nothing. What I have said is fact, accepted by the County Court Melbourne in the fraud trial – the Queen vs Brendan James Harty on the 1st of October 2001. Harty was convicted & sentenced to 2 years & 9 months imprisonment for the theft of $231,400 and for the forging (“Making False Documents”) of 152 cheques totalling $238,750. This represented approximately 25% of our cash flow.

3. As far as private legal action is concerned, my partners & I are undischarged bankrupts as a direct result of these events; we therefore have no capacity to fund any such nicety as legal action. We have had offers of “no win no fee” style representation, however when you look at various legal precedents you have to ask what is the likely outcome. If one analyses the “MaCombelle” case (Explanatory Note #2), one is left with the belief that justice is a commodity to be brought by the entity with the most money. The National Australia Bank could not afford to lose a court challenge such as ours. Given that their income is greater than the Commonwealth of Australia, & that they can announce the loss of $4bn then in the very next breath announce a $2bn record profit, one must accept that they have the financial capacity & muscle to buy whatever “justice” they require.

What the National Australia Bank has done here is ILLEGAL. My absolute frustration stems from the fact that if I behaved in the same manner I would be charged & in gaol for being an accessory to fraud and conversion at the very least. The Regulatory agencies are silent, or if they have written back, say these matters are outside their jurisdiction. When both legislators and regulators rely on this corrupt industry to regulate & police themselves, then couple this with the Bank’s capacity to “buy justice” one must conclude that the National Australia Bank by their size are immune from the law, these people are (according to the Fortune.com International list) the 30th largest corporation in the world.

All I have ever expected of any entity (including the thief, the National Australia Bank, APRA, the ACCC, and ASIC) is that they do no more – no less than their job according to the law, their statutory responsibilities, and behave according to a community acceptable standard of ethics. You (ASIC) advised that you were investigating the matter. When you had had Information set #1 for nearly three months & not responded; I assumed that the decision had already been made to proceed no further & that a “respectful time” would elapse before I received a letter confirming that belief – no further action to be taken. I recall making that statement to you, and my fears it seems were well founded. So I have some questions for you:-

1. If it is not the province of the various Legislative jurisdictions to protect their citizens from predatory, unconscionable & illegal conduct by major international corporations – ❖ Whose province is it?
2. If it is not the charter of Regulatory Agencies such as yours to uphold the law that created these Agencies, then:
   ❖ Who will uphold the law?
3. If it is possible for an enterprise to operate above the law
   ❖ How does one achieve that position?
   ❖ How do I apply?
   ❖ To whom do I apply? ASIC, APRA, ACCC or all three?

One of the real issues for Government here is that it is the Public Purse that picks up the final and exaggerated cost of these events. These costs are imposed upon the Commonwealth & State financiers (the taxpayers) for the loss of taxation revenues, the costs of investigation, prosecution, incarceration, victim support (a poor attempt at humour here), & the rehabilitation of the offender. Not to mention the losses from the negative impacts upon regional employment & confidence, and the immense waste of resources & money that many good officers expend every year on employment & regional initiatives to develop these regions. I estimate that 99% of cheque fraud could be stopped in its infancy if Banking Institutions did no more than the job we pay them to handomely to do. That is basic signature verification and to act in accordance with their statutory responsibilities. Particularly where that bank having detected fraudulent activity (forged signatures) in the operation of their customers’ account, to then act upon that information according to those same statutory responsibilities.

I also believe that there must be an alternative to the wholesale foreclosure & liquidation of small businesses by banking institutions. Banks pursue this policy to protect their liabilities in case of legal repercussions. Once a person is bankrupted (eg my partners & I), that effectively cancels all current, pending & future legal action & this knowledge underpins the bank’s tactics in this area. From a National economic perspective, how much better would it have been if an “Administration” facility were available to us and others, this includes the Ansetts, OneTels, HHH’s & to the legions of others; particularly in regard to the employees, creditors, shareholders, associated businesses, and the other flow-on repercussions. The way these matters were handled, everyone lost – there was no alternative.

In respect of this “Administration” facility, I am currently looking at the US “Chapter 11” system. I believe that a similar process should be invoked in this country under Federal Court or regulatory supervision. To quote the US Federal Court “The theory behind this chapter is that an ongoing business is of greater value than if it is foreclosed on and assets liquidated”. Some major US Corporations have survived that process to continue & prosper for the benefit of creditors, shareholders & their National economy alike.

If we sit back & accept the illegal conduct that is exemplified by the National Australia Bank in this instance, then we really do deserve the banking industry that we have today. I also firmly believe that this conduct and their rampant profiteering will continue until regulatory authorities begin to uphold their statutory responsibilities and prosecute these corporations for their criminal conduct and breaches of law.

As far as their rampant profiteering is concerned, I am also of the opinion that a publicly owned Savings & Development Bank needs to be established. I understand that the New Zealand Government has recently come to this same realisation & established the Post Office Bank; surprisingly, fees and charges have uniformly decreased across the sector. A bank established over here though must have at its heart an ethical charter and act with the interests of the Nation & the regional communities they serve. This as a Nation we desperately need but we do not have.

I ask that you please review, consider and act upon this additional and all other information provided previously particularly the questions that are raised in Explanatory Note #3 and elsewhere.

Understand that I intend to force public debate upon this issue until it is resolved in such a way as that it can never happen to anyone else again. Please also note that I have not yet focused upon the conduct of the banks receiver & manager in this criminal matter.

There has to be a better way.

Yours in the forlorn quest for ethics, equity, fairness, honesty, integrity and justice in the banking system.

Dear Mr Buckman

NATIONAL AUSTRALIA BANK LIMITED (NAB) (ACN 004 044 937)

I refer to our recent discussion in relation to this matter.

I understand that your complaint consists of your concern that the NAB does not have in place procedures for the verification of cheque signatures. You state that this resulted in an accountant stealing funds belonging to your company. I note that the accountant has since been sentenced to a jail term of over two years.

After careful consideration ASIC has decided that we will not commence an investigation into the issues you have raised at this time.

ASIC conducts an assessment of every complaint we receive. In determining which matters we will select for further action consideration is given to a range of factors, including the likely regulatory effect of any available action.

The matters you raise in your complaint appear to concern to the bank in question, and the banking industry as a whole. The issue is, however, not a matter ASIC is able to effectively pursue as securities and financial product regulator. You may wish to raise the matter with the Banking Industry Ombudsman, who can be reached at:

You may also wish to bring your concerns to the attention of your local member of parliament.

We have recorded the information you have provided in our confidential internal database. This information will assist us if we receive further similar complaints.

Although we have decided not to investigate your complaint at this time, this does not prevent you from pursuing any civil remedies otherwise available to you. Your legal adviser can provide you with more information about what other options may be open to you to pursue this matter privately. Once again, I apologise for the delay in our contacting you in relation to this matter.

Reference: 1458/03 - Response from Kim Stoley

Dear Sir/ Madam,

I refer to my Distribution Set #1 sent recently and additional evidence provided. As the responsible authority under various Commonwealth Acts could you please respond to the following questions in respect to those Acts:

The Cheques & Payments System

I expect that the National Australia Bank are a part of the “Cheques & Payments” System.
1. What Acts, licences and/or Regulations govern membership of the National Australia Bank within the Cheques & Payments System?
2. What Acts, licences and/or Regulations govern the conduct of the National Australia Bank within the Cheques & Payments System?
3. What are the responsibilities of member Institutions of the Cheques & Payments System in respect of the integrity of the system, each other, and their depositors & account holders?
4. What responsibility does a member Institution have in respect of the protection of their depositors’ funds when that institution acts as the facilitator of that “clearance” between itself and their depositor? (For example but not limited to: the removal of depositors funds from that depositors account, money held in trust by that institution; particularly the conversion to “Cash” of a depositors’ cheque).

In relation to the Financial Services Reform Act 2001

1. Is the National Australia Bank the holder of an Australian market licence?
2. In which market/markets are the National Australia Bank licensed to operate?
3. What are the conditions under which the National Australia Bank must operate?
4. What are the rules and procedures governing the markets operation?
5. Does this licence permit the National Australia Bank to operate a “clearing and settlement facility” under the Financial Services Act?
6. If so, then what are the rules and procedures governing the operation of the clearing and settlement facility?
7. What products are registered by the National Australia Bank for provision to customers (retail & wholesale) under the licences above?
8. Is the National Australia Bank’s “Cheque product” a “product” under the Financial Services Act?

9. What are the rules and procedures governing the operation of these products?

10. Should a Licence exist, what circumstances would constitute such a severe “breach of licence” that would cause that licence to be cancelled, suspended or placed under administration?

In relation to the National Australia Bank’s “Cheque Product”:

1. Are deposited funds that a customer deposits into their account with their “Financial Institution” legally defined as “moneys held in trust” by that Banking and/or Financial Institution?

2. What Acts and Licences govern the conduct of the Bank in relation to:
   - The management and Security of depositors’ funds that they hold in trust?
   - What are the duties and responsibilities placed upon a Banking and/or Financial Institution in the removal of depositors moneys from their account held by that Institution?
   - Does “Division 9—Enforcement failing to pay client money into an account” of the Financial Services Act apply?

3. Is a “Cheque Facility” a “custodial or depository service” in regard to the provisions of the Financial Services Act sections “12BAA Definition of financial product” and “12BABB Meaning of financial service”?

In Reference to the Trade Practices Act 1974 and the National Australia Banks’ Cheque Product:

1. Does any part of this Act apply to Banking & Financial Institutions and their products eg Cheque Facility or savings account?

2. Does Part IVA—Unconscionable conduct – sections 51AAB through 51AC apply?

3. Does Part V—Consumer Protection – sections 51AF through 65A apply?

4. Does Part VA—Liability of manufacturers and importers for defective goods apply?

5. Are Cheques considered as “Securities” under this Act?

In Reference to the Corporations Act as amended in respect of the conduct of the receiver & manager (Mr Paul Bunney & Scott Partners) In respect of Part 5.5—Voluntary winding up; and of the Act generally

The Directors of Basstech Pty Ltd (ACN 006 035 301) on advice from our then advisor Mr Paul Bunney requested that the National Australia Bank appoint a receiver & manager to the company. At this time the Bank’s conduct was unknown to us. The bank duly appointed our advisor as their Receiver & Manager.

1. Does any part of this Act apply to the conduct of a Receiver & Manager?

2. What are the duties & responsibilities of the Receiver & Manager?

3. Do the duties of a receiver & manager include the calling and holding of a creditors meeting?

4. Is an appointed Receiver & Manager appointed to “protect the interests & act for all creditors of a company; or, appointed “to protect the interests & act on behalf of the sole entity that appointed them”?

In Reference to the Crimes Act

Does this Act apply to the conduct of the National Australia Bank in relation to the dealing of in specific stolen property & with the explicit knowledge that those cheques were the subject of fraud and forged signatures were involved?

In respect of the Criminal Code Act 1995 in particular,
Part 2.4—Extensions of criminal responsibility and Section 11.2 Complicity and common purpose
Section 11.5 Conspiracy
Also Part 2.5—Corporate criminal responsibility

The National Australia Bank first detected forged signatures on cheques on the 1st of May 1998.
They processed and cleared that forged cheque on that occasion and other forged cheques on a further 151 separate occasions.

1. Does this Act apply in relation to the conduct of the National Australia Bank and its officers?
2. If not – then why not?

I remain as always, ready and willing to assist your Commission to investigate this matter and return some semblance of JUSTICE to this & other events. I would welcome an appointment with your investigators to provide copies of and review additional evidence in my possession.

There has to be a better way.

Yours in the forlorn quest for Ethics, Equity, Fairness, Honesty, Integrity and Justice in the banking system.

Dear Mr Buckman

I refer to your letters dated 4 October 2007 addressed to Commissioner John Martin and the Regional Director, Melbourne.

I note your reference to earlier correspondence with the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) in 2003 and 2005 and your correspondence with the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) and the Australian Prudential Regulatory Authority (APRA). I also note your current letter has been sent to ASIC and APRA.

In your letter you again raise issues concerning the role of the National Australia Bank (NAB) and in a more general sense, you question the bank’s fitness, competence and ethical capacity to be registered as a corporation and hold a banking licence.

As indicated in previous letters from the ACCC (to which you refer), the specific issues you raised in respect of the alleged conduct of the NAB were considered in terms of sections 51AC and 52 of the Trade Practices Act 1974 (the Act). You were also advised in our letter dated 1 December 2005 that the ACCC has no authority to launch proceedings to recover damages for the conduct about which you complain, even if a contravention of the Act could be established. As noted, the law imposes time limitations on when actions may be taken under sections 52 and 51AC of the Act and your complaint relates to alleged conduct that occurred outside these limitations.

I stress the wider issues you have raised in respect of the NAB are not within the jurisdiction of the ACCC, and are properly considered by ASIC and APRA. You have already corresponded with these organisations and I am unable to comment in respect of any action they consider appropriate.

The ACCC has clearly explained its position to you in writing and verbally on at least three occasions. Under the circumstances, I do not intend corresponding further on this matter.

Yours sincerely

Response to Buckman re: letter of 17th of November 2005

This letter is in response to a copy of that letter addressed to the National Australia Bank (John Stewart) – Campaign #7 letter.

1 December 2005

Mr Paul Buckman
PO Box 120
TINAMBA VIC 3859

Dear Mr Buckman

I refer to your letter of 17 November 2005 wherein you enquire “why a powerful corporation, the National Australia Bank (NAB), is empowered and protected by the legislative, justice, legal, regulatory and investigative agencies of this country to defraud its customers and break the law”.

I note that in 2003 and 2004 you raised with this office concern regarding certain conduct allegedly engaged in by the NAB and that this office advised you that it did not propose pursuing your concerns. I understand from your enquiry and the accompanying material provided with your letter that you are dissatisfied that the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) and other regulatory bodies, including the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC), are not prepared to take any action regarding your allegations against the NAB. I understand that you would like to know why the ACCC is not prepared to take any action regarding your allegations.

As previously advised, the ACCC administers the Trade Practices Act 1974 (the Act). The only sections of the Act under which it would appear that some aspects of the conduct which is the subject of your concern may fall for consideration are sections 51AC and 52. As you are aware, section 51AC of the Act prohibits a corporation in trade or commerce in connection with the supply of goods or services for the purpose of trade or commerce from engaging in conduct that is, in all the circumstances, unconscionable. Section 52 of the Act prohibits a corporation in trade or commerce from engaging in conduct that is misleading or that is likely to mislead or deceive.

The Act does not provide for fines to be imposed against a corporation that contravenes section 51AC or section 52 of the Act. The Act does, however, allow the ACCC to bring a representative action seeking damages on behalf of persons who suffer loss or damage as a result of a contravention of section 51AC or section 52. The ACCC only exercises such power in limited situations. Furthermore, the Act only allows a claim for damages in respect of a contravention of section 51AC that took place prior to 2001 to be brought within two years and in the case of a contravention of section 52 that took place prior to 2001 within 3 years of the cause of action arising. In this case, it would appear that any cause of action that you may have under the Act in respect of any contravention of section 51AC or section 52 of the Act by the NAB arising from your allegations arose more than three years ago. As such, even if the NAB contravened section 51AC or section 52 of the Act (and in this respect I wish to point out that it is not clear from the information provided that there has been a contravention), it would appear that the ACCC would be statute barred from seeking damages on your behalf.

As previously advised, ASIC administers consumer protection legislation which specifically applies in relation to the provision of financial services. You may wish to note that ASIC’s jurisdiction also extends to certain conduct engaged in prior to ASIC assuming its current responsibility for consumer protection in the financial services sector. Accordingly, as previously advised, even if the ACCC had jurisdiction in respect of this matter, ASIC would appear to be the most appropriate authority to consider your concerns. I understand from the material that you have provided that you have raised your concerns with ASIC and that it has advised you that it does not have jurisdiction to pursue them.

In order to try to seek redress for any loss or damage that you may have suffered as a result of the alleged conduct by the NAB, you may wish to consider raising this matter with the Banking and Financial Services Ombudsman. The Banking and Financial Services Ombudsman Scheme is a free and independent dispute resolution service. The Scheme considers complaints from individuals and small businesses about financial service providers operating in Australia. The Scheme’s members include banks and their affiliates and other providers of financial services. The Ombudsman is able to investigate disputes and make decisions that are binding on members. The Ombudsman’s contact details are as follows:

Level 5
31 Queen Street
MELBOURNE VIC 3000
Tel: 1300 780 808

In the circumstances, I confirm that this office does not propose taking any action regarding your concerns.

Yours sincerely

Dear Mr Buckman

I am writing in relation to your most recent letter to the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) dated 23 May 2005 addressed to Commissioner John Martin concerning the National Australia Bank (“NAB”) conduct towards your company Basstech Pty Ltd in 1999. Commissioner Martin has asked me to respond to your letter on his behalf.

Our records indicate that you have previously contacted the ACCC regarding this matter on 11 November 2002, 5 January 2003, 22 January 2003, 9 February 2003, 29 September 2003 and 1 October 2004. The Commission has responded on each occasion advising that jurisdiction of your matter rests with the Australian Securities and Investment Commission (ASIC).

In your most recent letter you attached an Addendum, apparently available on the University of Sydney web site, to your 23 May 2005 letter stating ‘at no time has any member or investigator from the ACCC ever interviewed me to discuss the evidence, let alone to request copies of relevant evidence’. It is the case that you have both spoken to and corresponded with a number of ACCC investigators concerning NAB’s conduct towards Basstech. You have also supplied the Commission with a considerable amount of information which has been considered and assessed on more than one occasion and found to be outside the ACCC’s jurisdiction.

In my view your 23 May 2005 letter does not contain any new information or raise any relevant issues that have not been raised in your previous correspondence with the ACCC. Our assessment remains that the conduct you have described is not within the ACCC’s jurisdiction and consequently will not be pursued further.
Based on the information you have provided to the ACCC, it is apparent that you have been the victim of fraudulent conduct that led to the demise of your business. That you or anyone else finds themselves in these circumstances is a matter of great regret. However, it remains the case that neither the Trade Practices Act nor the ACCC is able to provide a remedy for your circumstances.

Yours sincerely,

Buckman to John Martin (Australian Competition & Consumer Commission) correcting statements made by him in response to Prof. Evan Jones of the 8th of April 2005.

Dear Sir,

I write to highlight certain anomalies & errors in your perception of reality particularly as it applies to the case of Basstech Pty Ltd see: 006 035 501 as related in the letter to Professor Evan Jones from your Mr Nigel Ridgeway.

I bring to your attention page 3, “Paul Buckman & Basstech 1999”. Paragraph 2 states “As some here was who was culpable for the loss of the money, Basstech for hiring a fraudster, or the bank for lack of diligence when clearing cheques? If the bank was found to have been culpable then it is arguable that in subsequent actions may have been considered by the courts.

The determination of culpability by the bank in this matter is a threshold issue, this relies on legislation other than the Trusts Practices Act. How fortunate?

Firstly, the first sentence, the facts are that three things went wrong here:

1. Yes, we did hire a “professional person”, Harry - a chartered accountant to run our financial section. Unbeknown to us was that he was a chronic gambling addict.

2. Our appointed financial advisors & Public Accountants (Phillipson & Co. of St Kilda, the theft's former employer) had explicit knowledge of his (Harry's) chronic gambling addiction & were not aware that he had re-activated. Phillipson's chose not to advise us of his addiction when we were informed that Harry was to join our company. They as our "professional Financial Advisors & Accountants" had an ethical & legal duty of care to us - to us as their client.

3. The National Australia Bank as our "Diligent & Prudent" bankers have a legal duty of care to their customer and depositor to protect the interests of that customer to manage those customer accounts & deposited moneys in an ethical, diligent & prudent manner according to law.

It is those above that you & the regulatory industry choose not to recognise. The issue here is not Basstech's conduct in hiring Harry, or in their general conduct, the fact is that we have been congratulated by Detectives & Forensic Accountants for uncovering the fraud so quickly - our policies, practices & procedures were praised on that basis & deemed to have been very efficient.

The real issue here is one you choose to ignore, I know its inconvenient but it directly drives to the core of the safety & security of depositor funds held by the National Australia Bank on behalf of their customer, their diligence in the management of those customer accounts, and their predatory & criminal conduct in their endeavours to protect the banks' liabilities to their customer. Given the recent conduct of this bank around the world & here in Australia; the real issue here should rightfully be a question of the right, fitness & competence of the National Australia Bank to hold a banking licence in this country.

Authorised for public release

It is interesting to note from your "Basstech" para #2 comments noted above, that you have effectively accepted that legal issues exist in this case, however your agencies view seems to be "It's too hard so its not our problem". I have in former times laboured under the misconception that the ACCC was there to protect the community interest, & to prosecute the predatory corporations over unconscionable conduct & criminal practices. It is clear that contrary to the public spin, no such will to execute such a mandate exists; for if it did then you would have clearly seen the issues of this case in close & precise terms. Or is it that you only target the easy mark, the celebrity cases, those without the finances & will to defend their criminal conduct in all cases to the end regardless of cost?

I request that the ACCC formally acknowledge in writing that each of the "points of conduct" noted below is behaviour that is totally acceptible to the ACCC and is considered to be conduct that is neither unconscionable nor criminal.

The National Australia Bank has:

- Detected forged signatures on customer cheques, that is detected FRAUD IN PROGRESS, the bank then knowingly assisted a thief to access their customer's bank account.

- Detecting forged signatures on customer cheques, that is detected FRAUD IN PROGRESS, the bank then declined to advise their customer of that detection, nor did they seek the authority & direction from their customer to authenticate those transactions.

- Having detected criminal activity, knowingly surrender the banks money to a thief then re-assign responsibility for the banks conduct to Basstech in the form of "Overdraft money" the value of which ultimately represented 25% of our annual receipts as shown

- From cheques referred to their account manager by other banks, the bank detected on at least 35 separate occasions, cheques bearing forged signatures yet that bank continued to honour forged cheques without question.

- Then, in addition, charged Basstech in excess of $21,000 in overdraft interest & fees on that money removed illegally without our legal mandate. These represent fees & charges for services not provided or worse, of the bank having no intention of providing.

- The compound effect of these actions placed Basstech in an Insolvent condition.

- Whilst "knowing" that the bank had substantial liability in the underlying events, The National Australia Bank attempted to create a more favourable position for itself by formalising an "unseffed" overdraft into a formal loan under guarantee and the "Registered Debenture" held over Basstech by that bank, thereby ensuring their priority over assets. I believe that these and all other guarantees given to the National Australia Bank became void at that time by reason of the principles expressed by the High Court of Australia in COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA LTD. v. AMADIO (1983) 151
  CLR 447 & reinforced in the National Australia Bank v Voloshin (2300) NSW SC 84
  (25 Feb 2000).

The National Australia Bank made an express misrepresentation that induced the Directors of Basstech to enter into those guarantees. That misrepresentation includes but is not limited to the National Australia Bank's withholding of substantial & relevant information pertaining to facts surrounding that fraud and the National Australia Bank's confusion in that fraud.

- Whilst "knowing" that the National Australia Bank had substantial liability in the antecedent events, that bank then used that insolvent condition as the justification to appoint the receiver & manager to liquidate our business & assets.

- Whilst "knowing" that the National Australia Bank had substantial liability in the antecedent events; that bank then forced us the directors & shareholders to personal

Authorized for public release bankruptcy, in order to remove from us all financial & legal capacity to challenge the banks dishonest, unconscionable and criminal conduct, thereby cancelling any proposed litigation and removing our legal capacity to set on behalf of Bassetts. Surely this is to itself predatory & unconscionable.

- This was done before the Police Investigation was concluded while the evidence collected was still under investigation and "rob justic" thereby restricting/removing our capacity to legally defend ourselves.
- That bank knowingly used this "legal" strategy to remove our capacity to hold the bank accountable thereby protecting the banks interest; and is a conspiracy to deprive their customer, their customers creditors & perverting the course of justice.

It also needs to be said that the banks receiver & manager (Paul Burness of Scott Partners, Melbourne Victoria) conspired with the National Australia Bank in that he Burness-

- In defiance of settled law, refused to hold a creditors meeting or consider any other creditors interest save that of "his appointor" — the National Australia Bank.
- Refused to comply with Corporations Law, The ASIC Act and the statutory obligations of a Receiver & Manager by protecting the interests of one creditor (the National Australia Bank) in preference to all others including the interest of the Commonwealth.
- Refused to investigate the banks conduct and collude with a thief in the fraud against Bassetts particularly the National Australia Bank "were his appointor".
- Consented with the bank to act against the interests of Bassetts and acting contrary to law and legal precedent — in Freeman v National Australia Bank Ltd [2002] FCA 427 (9 April 2002); SPINDER & Co 1 said at [5] "it has been said that the receiver & manager is the agent of the mortgagee (Bassetts), not the agent of the bank" (whether or not he was appointed by the bank). It is obvious from correspondence between Burness & myself that reality and commercial custom differs from judicial and legal perception.
- Consented with the National Australia Bank in negotiating with that bank to act as their Receiver & Manager whilst still acting in the capacity of Bassetts professional financial adviser; in that he attended meetings between the National Australia Bank and

The Issues & Ramifications

In Hedley Byrne v. Lord Devon, Lord Denning likened the position of banker and customer to that of solicitor and client p. 330. Lord Denning M.R. did the same in Dalton v. Bogner Regia, treating them both as professional men. Again in relation to professional men and after referring to the solicitor cases Lord Devon M.R. had this to say in Basso Petroleum v. Marden p. 819:

> "In the case of a professional man, the duty to use reasonable care arises not only in contract, but is also imposed by the law, apart from the contract, and is therefore actionable in tort. . . . A professional man may give advice under a contract for reward, or without a contract in pursuance of a voluntary assumption of responsibility gratuitously without reward. In either case he is under one and the same duty to use reasonable care... In the one case it is by reason of a term implied by law. In the other it is by reason of a duty imposed by law." (my emphasis)

5. The conduct of my partners & I is consistent with a duty & responsibility to protect the financial interests of all related parties. Those parties being our creditors, bankers, employees and shareholders.

Our company was a small business with an annual revenue base (1996) of the order of $400,000 per annum but with strong forecast growth (turnover 1998/1999 was over $1.4 million). Despite the capital base we, the owners & Directors, saw & committed to the need to establish solid business practices and standards to underpin that growth and to protect the interests of all parties to this relationship.

To this end Basso & its Directors:

1. Ensured that all share & bond, financial instruments & company books were at all times secured in the direct custody of a Director of Basso.
2. Undertook & achieved ISO9002 certification & applied to all business aspects, practices & procedures.
3. Employed the services of a "Chartered Accountant" as the Basso financial controller, to reinforce our commitment to proper financial accountability, standards & controls.

Money illegally removed from the Banktech account due to forged signatures total $238,720. In addition to this theft by the National Australia Bank, they charged Banktech (their customer) in excess of $21,000 in interest, fees &amp; other charges on that money illegally removed. "In Selangor United Rubber Estates Ltd v. Crawford 49, the directors of a company abused their position as signatories of the company's bank account. Their dealings with the company's money ought to have put the bank on enquiry. It was submitted however on behalf of the bank that even so the bank's duty extended no further than to see that the signatories on the particular cheques concerned were those of the authorized signatories. Ungard-Thomas J. reflected that submission (at page 1608).

"If this were so then it seems to follow that, even if the bank actually knew that the authorized signatories were misappropriating the company's funds, it could nevertheless rely on the signatures. This could be so outrageous as to lie outside the intention and true construction of the mandate. ....... As between the company and the bank, the mandate, in my view, operates within the normal contractual relationships of customer and banker and does not exclude them. These relationships include the normal obligation of using reasonable skill and care. And that duty, on the part of the bank, of using reasonable skill and care, is a duty owed to the other party to the contract, the customer, who in this case is

The Issuer & Ramification

Attention should be given to the legal precedents shown in the column at left, particularly Kerr, Tai Hing & Selangor particularly the bank's duty to their customer. In this case, Bastech - their duty is not to the signatories. This duty goes further than checking signatures it derives to the true mandate of the customer – Bastech Pty Ltd.

The source of the ramifications of this bank conduct are:

- The liquidation of the company (Bastech) with its resultant loss of regional employment etc.
- The repossession of my partners home & its resultant sale at a mortgage auction.
- Our loss of employment, income & assets.
- The bankruptcy of us, the former shareholders & Directors of Bastech & the resulting ramifications upon professional & personal standing within the community.
- The stress & trauma of the processes involved in one's status as a victim of criminal activity.

At the very least the National Australia Bank's conduct is unconscionable & preatory.

8. Scott Partners of Malvern Vic (Public Accountants)
The National Australia Bank's appointed receiver & manager.
In breach of company law they set about to favour the interests of the National Australia Bank ahead of all other creditors.
Indeed no creditor meeting was ever called.

In Freeman v National Australia Bank Ltd (2002) FCA 427 (9 April 2002); SPENDER J said in [2] “Whether in fact any default by the Receiver in the sale of the property of Mr Freeman can be ascribed to the National Australia Bank, the petitioning creditor, notwithstanding the contractual provision which asserts that the Receiver is the agent of the mortgagee, ... is a matter of quite considerable practical importance.”

At the end of May early June 1999, Banktech retained Paul Burns of Scott Partners Malvern Vic as our financial advisor to assist us with trade-off & other negotiations between the National Australia Bank & us.

Burness ultimately became the appointed Receiver & Manager.
I have reference from various judgesmen where the receiver & manager are deemed by a Court to be responsible to & act on behalf of the mortgagees – that is, the customer.
Mr Paul Burns of Scott Partners failed in his duty as Banktech’s Receiver & Manager (legally a position of Trust – see Seelinger):
1. By not considering any other creditors interests except those of the National Australia Bank.
2. Refused to investigate serious breaches of law & other issues concerning the National Australia Bank on the grounds that “they sue his solicitors”.

3. Acted against the advice of the Directors of Banktech in completing the sale, & acting against the interests of all other parties.

Further, Burns as a “Professional Men” failed his “Duty of Care” obligations in law and:
1. Knewingly colluded with the National Australia Bank in that he complied with the bank in negotiating with them to act as their Receiver & Manager while still acting in the capacity of Banktech’s professional financial advisor. He amended meetings between the National Australia Bank and Banktech’s Managing Director.

He is therefore guilty of Conversion.</td>

9. Conspiracy to Defraud THEIR Customer

When we [not the bank] detected criminal activity on or around the 17th of May 1999 the National Australia Bank contrived to conceal their extended knowledge of the facts from us during discussions & negotiations (including loan & trade on negotiations) during May & June of 1999.

The focus of these negotiations in our view was to enable Banstedt to trade on & trade its way out of the difficulties known to us at that time.

The bank sought to add my name to the agreements, guarantees and securities available to them for call. At that point in time I was neither a guarantor nor signatory to any business document, other than as an account signatory, with the National Australia Bank in support of Banstedt debt to that bank.

High Court of Australia in COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA LTD v. AMADIO (1983) 151 CLR 447

Whilst "knowing" that the bank held substantial liability in the underlying events, The National Australia Bank attempted to create a more favourable position for itself by formalizing an "unofficial" overdraft into a formal loan under guarantee and the "Registered Debenture" held over Banstedt by that bank. This act was designed to ensure their priority over assets & to provide the bank with the means to force the bankruptcy of both my partners & I.

I believe that these and all other guarantees given to the National Australia Bank by all guarantors became void at that time by reason of the principles expressed in Amadio and reinforced in Voloshin.

During these negotiations, the National Australia Bank withheld vital information from us as the signatories & providers of that security information regarding the conduct of the fraud and the existence at that time of forged signatures in the operation of our cheque account including the bank's misconduct which involved the clearance of forged signatures, & other acts.

At this time we remained ignorant of both the conduct of the National Australia Bank, and the exact methods employed by the brief in the execution of that fraud.

We were made aware for the first time of the misconduct of the bank & its staff on the 1st of September 1999 from documents surrendered by that bank under Victoria Police search warrant.

That is 10 days after the appointment of Burrells

10. On the 20th of August 1999 the National Australia Bank appointed the Receiver & Manager to our company with instructions to liquidate the business and assets of Bashtech. Paul Barnes of Scott Partners Malvern Vic, at that point ceased to act as our financial adviser.
   The liquidation process took 5 weeks, from the 20th of August to the 30th of September 1999.
   Contracts for the sale of the business & assets being signed by the receiver & manager on the 30th of September 1999 despite a written request on him from the Bashtech Directors to investigate the bank's conduct & liability.
   The owners & Directors of Bashtech refused to be a party to that outrageous, unconscionable & criminal act of sale.

11. The National Australia Bank pursued us to bankruptcy with extreme haste and whilst, due to the fraud trial of Harry, the evidence was sub judice.
    The National Australia Bank did this knowing that they held significant & continuing liability in these matters
    My partners were declared bankrupts around the end of March 2000, whilst my bankruptcy was declared on the 29th of June 2000.

12. Fraud is proven in the County Court Melbourne trial of Brendan James Harry.
    Harry was convicted on the 1st of October 2001 & sentenced on the 9th of October 2001.

This is a not a trivial matter and direct breaches of law are involved. Those breaches involve on the part of the National Australia Bank, its staff and their appointed receiver & manager:

1. Theft;
2. Collusion;
3. Conversion;
4. Conspiracy to defraud;
5. Being an accessory to theft & fraud before, during & after the fact;
6. The potential for Tax evasion.

At the very least the actions of the National Australia Bank passing forged cheques and enforcing subsequent penalties upon Bashtech is "Unconscionable conduct" as validated in National Australia Bank v Voloshin in the NSW Supreme Court mentioned earlier. In subsequent to the National Australia Bank passing forged cheques they proceeded to repossess Voloshin’s home due to the loan falling into arrears. The court found that the loan fell into arrears because the bank cleared forged cheques: their attempt to force their “rights” over Voloshin’s home was deemed UNCONSCIONABLE. In Voloshin it was an attempt – in Bashtech it went far beyond that. I think I read somewhere that unconscionable conduct fell well within your mandate.

Authorised for public release
I also point out that this is not an isolated incident, it is not an aberration; please refer to the attached article from the Melbourne Herald Sun "$3. I'm siphoned off". Its essence is "company employee business account steals cheque, accountant forges signature, bank clears forged cheque". (Bastock, Voloshin & now Griffiths of Northwood Park Stud — who's next — your family — maybe?)

Sir, during my blissful days of ignorance I firmly believed the public spin & hype that the regulatory agencies (the ACCC, ASIC & APRA) were about the protection both of Small Business and the public interest. It is obvious by your continued refusal & inaction that you are solely engaged in the active protection of the privileged & powerful.

Question - Who will protect Small Business & consumers generally from these criminal corporations? If I am reminded of a quote (origin unknown) "For evil to triumph, it takes good men to do nothing". Whilst you do nothing, I intend to force each & every player in this charade to publicly justify their conduct or lack of it — that is an absolute promise.

Fraud at this level, to this scope & scale can only live with the indifference, collusion &/or active protection of the regulatory & legal industries & the court system. Whether the survival of this fraud is by way of indifference, collation or active protection is irrelevant as the end result is precisely the same. As I stated earlier, the real issue here should rightfully be a question of the right, fitness & competence of the National Australia Bank to hold a banking licence in this country & in any ethical society.

We may have a system of law in this country, but under no circumstances can it ever be considered a system of justice; what we have in fact is a system of actively managed corruption, actively managed by the regulatory & judicial systems that are supposed to protect the public & the public interest.

Yours in the solemn quest for ethics, equity, honesty & integrity in the banking system.

April 2005
Response to Dr Evan Jones of the University of Sydney.

On the 13 January 2005 Dr Jones submitted to the Australian Competition & Consumer Commission “working papers” and other documents questioning their lack of action and protection of small business with regard to predatory bank behaviour towards that sector.
unconscionable occurred before section 51AC (which created broader protection for small businesses in their dealings with larger businesses) came into effect on 1 July 1998. Of the remaining three, the Goornans and the Walter Family were unlikely to have contained allegations that may have made out the elements of unconscionable conduct under scrutiny from the courts. The Walter Family case was also disqualified as the sum in dispute exceeded the $1 million limit then imposed by the new section 51AC.

- On the facts available it is our assessment that, of the eight case studies, only two are likely to have contained allegations that, had they been proven, may have made out the elements of unconscionable conduct under scrutiny from the courts. The possible 51AC unconscionable conduct case, Ross Delahunty, occurred before the advent of the section in 1998. The possible 51AA unconscionable case, Keith Smith, occurred before the advent of that section in 1992.

- In each case where the ACCC declined to pursue an unconscionable conduct action it did so because it was assessed that the conduct did not amount to unconscionable conduct.

- I am unable to agree that a collection of eight case studies over a period of 17 years where small businesses have experienced difficulties with a particular bank amount to a failure of the Act and its administration to provide a secure environment for small businesses. While the small business failures detailed in the Working Papers are a cause for deep regret it seems that other factors such as fraud, lack of liquidity, drought and below expected sales were often critical events that made the businesses more vulnerable to failure.

- As to whether unconscionable conduct can be considered in relation to cumulative conduct by one party, e.g. a bank, towards a number of small businesses, I should note that as a procedural matter, each party to an action should generally be capable of sustaining the cause of action independently of other parties to those proceedings. Further, there are certain requirements regarding the commonality of interest of parties to such a matter, and it is not clear whether such a group of unrelated parties, who have had dealings with a bank over a course of some years, would have the requisite commonality. I should also note that, in general, actions for breaches of the TPA must be commenced within six years after the day on which the cause of action that relates to the conduct accrues.

- I would also note that, in general, the factors in section 51AC allow the court to consider whether the conduct of the stronger party was necessary to protect that party's legitimate business interests (refer to section 51AC (3) and (4) (b)). So, for example, certain conduct, or a course of conduct, might be detrimental to the interests of the small business concerned, however if it is referable to the stronger party's legitimate business interests, this may indicate that the conduct is less likely to contravene section 51AC. For example, a court may find that it would be in the legitimate business interests of a bank to implement and review its procedures to manage its lending risk.
Working Paper Case Studies

The Goonans 2001

There is an implication in the Goonan case study that their application to extend their overdraft may have been reneged as part of a wider strategy of the bank at the time to shed marginal borrowers, and perhaps this was the case. As non-defaulters it may be unfair that the Goonans were not offered further finance to get them through what was perceived as a short term cash flow problem, however conduct which is unfair will generally not be sufficient to establish that unconscionable conduct has occurred.

Paul Buckman and Basstech 1999

Basstech was a small business run by Paul Buckman and his partners. A financial controller hired by Basstech committed significant cheque fraud on the company for which he was convicted. The case study asserts that the bank cleared all 184 cheques bearing forged signatures including 35 referred to the bank for explicit signature verification, when the Cheques Act 1986 meant that they had no legitimate authority to do so. Basstech lost 25% of its annual receipts through the fraud and was forced into insolvency. The bank charged Basstech $21,348 in interest fees and charges on the stolen money and used that insolvent condition as a trigger to appoint a receiver.

At issue here was who was culpable for the loss of the money; Basstech for hiring the fraudster, or the bank for lack of diligence when clearing cheques? If the bank was found to have been culpable then it is arguable that its subsequent actions may have been considered unfair tactics by the stronger party and fall under the provisions of S1AC. The determination of culpability by the bank in this matter is a threshold issue that relies on legislation other than the Trade Practices Act.

The Walter family and Palatinat 1998

The Walters new business experienced lower than expected initial sales. In December 1998 they requested a restructuring of their loan facilities to reduce monthly payments and accepted a principal and interest combination loan of $380,000 and an one year fixed interest loan of $1 million. The Walters alleged that they were induced to execute the loans because of a verbal assurance that the one year fixed term loan would be unconditionally and automatically renewed, although these terms were not present in the formal loan documents. In April 2000 the bank expressed concern with the Walters profit and loss position (paper loss but apparently breaking even) and demanded the sale of the business and the home by 30 June 2000. A bank appointed receiver took possession of the business in December.
Like the Goonars, the Walters had not defaulted on their repayments. The Walters were experienced business people who entered into business contracts whose terms and conditions they were well equipped to understand. Withdrawal of support of a marginal business by the bank was harsh but is unlikely to have been unconscionable in breach of S1AC. Also in 1998 the loans totalling $1.38 million exceeded the S1AC threshold (which has since increased to $2 million).

Allegations that discovery documents were delivered in dribs and drabs and left on doorsteps, and that bank statements were withheld, are procedural issues and, as such, not conduct that would give rise to the setting aside of the contracts at issue.

The Walters represented themselves in court in an attempt to have the agreements set aside for unconscionable conduct alleging a position of special disadvantage. In National Australia Bank Limited v Fritz Walter and Ingrid Walter 16 February 2004 the court found that ‘They were, and are, intelligent, resourceful and experienced business people who had access to independent professional legal, financial and business advice in entering transactions designed to advance their own interests. The allegation of unconscionable conduct based on the unconscientious exploitation of special disability or special disadvantage, or any other basis, is not made out.’

The McMinns 1997

The McMinns reached a crucial point where their business expansion required commencement of work on a new child care building and they went ahead on verbal assurances from the new bank manager. Due to turmoil within the bank and/or mismanagement of the account the bank stopped building work in December and did not grant approval to restart until March 1997. The new development missed the critical beginning of school year enrolment period and as a consequence the McMinns experienced difficulty servicing their loans and the bank foreclosed.

In this case financial services supplied by the bank appear to have been of less than optimal quality and the McMinns were vulnerable due to the critical timing requirements of their business plan and shallow liquidity within the business which did not allow for unforeseen loss of income. However there is nothing in the relationship between the McMinns and the bank that put them at a special disadvantage within the meaning of section S1AA. In Samton the court held that ‘At least in the case of the experienced business person there must, in our opinion, be something more than commercial vulnerability (however extreme) to elevate disadvantage into special disadvantage.’

Notwithstanding that S1AC did not come into effect until 1 July 1998, the described conduct of the bank would nevertheless be unlikely to be construed as going beyond tough business practices or hard bargaining to breach section S1AC.

Lynton Freeman 1997
In July 1996 Freeman’s new bank manager required that he reduce his overdraft by $30,000 by November. In April 1997 a drought subsidy of $54,550 from the Queensland Rural Adjustment Authority that had been awaiting a bank certification that the business was viable, was approved pending the bank’s formal review. The bank never completed the review. The subsidy would have enabled Freeman to comply with the bank’s request for debt reduction.

Mediation proceeded on 4 December 1997. The mediation lasted a full day at the end of which a Deed of Mediation was produced which Mr Freeman and the Bank executed. Freeman agreed to attempt to sell his property and to exchange contracts of sale no later than 4 March 1998 in exchange for an offer from the Bank to forebear from enforcing the mortgages immediately. Clause 9.1 ‘immediately, absolutely and unconditionally releases the Bank, its officers and agents, from all claims which Freeman now has or, but for this Deed might have had against the Bank’.

When Freeman could not refinance the bank foreclosed. Freeman subsequently lost a series of court cases fighting bankruptcy including claiming unconscionable conduct due to special disability bought about by a medical condition that caused mental incapacity during mediation.

The accuracy of the bank’s budget forecasts and valuations regarding Freeman’s financial position, and the adequacy of its decision not to supply a certification of solvency to the Queensland Rural Adjustment Authority, cannot be assessed from the facts at hand. It is, however, assessed that a court would not find that Clause 9.1 went beyond what was necessary for the bank to protect its legitimate business interests and that a case of unconscionability was unlikely to succeed on the facts presented.

Ross Delahunty 1993

The alleged conduct by the bank in this matter could be of concern and may have amounted to unconscionable conduct in breach of section 51AC had the conduct concerned the Delahunty’s business transactions and had the allegations been proven and the conduct occurred after the introduction of the section in 1998.

Keith Smith 1984

The alleged conduct by the bank in this matter could be of concern and may have amounted to unconscionable conduct in breach of section 51AA had the allegations been proven and the conduct occurred after the introduction of the section in 1992.

The Somersets and Kabwand 1984

The Somersets were the victims of a fraud by the vendor of Gunnadoo, a property they purchased. By the time they won proceedings against the vendor in the Supreme Court the vendor had disposed of all his assets. The Somersets received legal advice that they should sue the bank in the Federal Court for misleading and deceptive conduct under section 52 of the Act. They did so but were unsuccessful.
Even if the Somersets had been successful in proving that the bank had engaged in misleading and deceptive conduct while providing financial services to the Somersets to assist in their purchase of Gunnadoo or Glenhaven, the unconscionable conduct provisions of the Act did not exist at the time of the conduct.

The division of responsibility between the ACCC and ASIC in the financial services industry

The Financial Services Reform Act 2001 gave ASIC jurisdiction in relation to unconscionable conduct arising from the supply of financial services under section 12CC of the ACCC Act.

In 2004 ASIC and the ACCC signed a Memorandum of Understanding setting out a framework for co-operation between the agencies, including arrangements for referrals, regular liaison and demarcation of roles. The Memorandum of Understanding clarifies that the regulation of unconscionable conduct arising from the supply of financial services will be the role of ASIC, as intended by the financial services reforms.

The ACCC and ASIC also have overlapping jurisdiction in the area of debt collection and in February 2005 jointly issued a draft debt collection guideline for public consultation.

The ACCC and unconscionable conduct matters

The ACCC has vigorously defended the rights of small businesses using the unconscionable conduct provisions of the Act, and details of some of these outcomes are available in the ACCC’s recently updated Guide to Unconscionable Conduct which I have enclosed for your information.

I trust the information provided in this letter has allayed some of your concerns regarding the administration of the unconscionable conduct provisions of the Act as it concerns unconscionable conduct arising from the supply of financial services to small businesses.

Yours sincerely,

EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION UNDER PARAGRAPH 7.1

Matters of Interest to ASIC

Listed below are the types of matters which are relevant to ASIC for the purposes of paragraph 7.1. This list is not exhaustive, and if the ACCC is in doubt as to whether a matter is likely to be of interest to ASIC, the ACCC should contact an ASIC liaison contact officer.

- companies:
  - registration of companies
  - conduct of company directors and officers
  - financial reporting
  - company mergers and acquisitions
- registration and conduct of company auditors, registered liquidators and official liquidators;
- financial markets (including the Australian Stock Exchange Ltd and Sydney Futures Exchange Ltd) and conduct of listed companies, brokers and traders;
- licensing, standards and conduct of financial services businesses, including fund managers, stockbrokers, financial advisers and insurance brokers;
- registration and records of, and conduct in relation to, managed investment schemes;
- APRA-regulated financial services businesses, including banks, superannuation funds and insurance companies:
  - how they comply with codes of practice
  - approval of consumer complaint resolution schemes
  - misconduct affecting consumers or misconduct as corporations
- misleading and deceptive, and unconscionable conduct, and undue harassment and coercion in relation to financial services including credit.

Matters of interest to ACCC

Listed below are the types of matters which are relevant to the ACCC for the purposes of paragraph 7.1. This list is not exhaustive, and if ASIC is in doubt as to whether a matter is likely to be of interest to the ACCC, ASIC should contact the ACCC contact officers referred to below.

- Business conduct:
  - Agreements, arrangements and/or understandings between competitors in a market which appear to involve:
    - Price-fixing
    - Sharing/allocation of markets (customers/tenders etc)

Response from my letter of the 1st of October 2004 raising further issues.

15 October 2004

Mr Paul Buckman
PO Box 120
Tinamba VIC 3859

Dear Mr Buckman

Thank you for your letter of 1 October 2004 and attachments whereby you raise concerns regarding the National Australia Bank. I refer also to your previous correspondence addressed to this office of 5 and 22 January, 9 February and 29 September 2003 regarding your concerns and this office’s replies of 20 January, 10 February and 2 October 2003.

You claim the conduct of the National Australian Bank in respect of the conduct you allege to be "unconscionable at the very least".

In my view your latest correspondence does not appear to raise any issues that were not raised previously by your former correspondence with this office.

As already advised, the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission ("ACCC") is responsible for administering the Trade Practices Act 1974 ("the Act"). While the Act prohibits a range of unfair and anti-competitive trade practices, the Financial Sector Reform (Amendments and Transitional Provisions) Act 1998, which commenced on 1 July 1998, implemented a new consumer protection regime for the financial services sector. Under this legislation, the Australian Securities and Investments Commission ("ASIC") was given primary responsibility for consumer protection and market integrity in the financial sector. The Financial Services Reform Act 2001, which commenced on 11 March 2002, gave ASIC further responsibility for consumer protection matters involving foreign exchange contracts, credit and unconscionable conduct under sections 51AA and 51AB of the Trade Practices Act 1974 in relation to financial services.

While the ACCC and ASIC continue to share responsibility for unconscionable conduct arising under section 51AC of the Trade Practices Act 1974, the ASIC Act 2001 makes specific provision for unconscionable conduct in the context of the provision of financial services in business transactions. As such, and in the first instance, ASIC would appear to be the more appropriate agency with whom to raise your concerns, not the ACCC. ASIC can be contacted on 1300 300 630.
As such, while your concerns have been recorded, I regret to advise this office is unable to pursue this matter further.

Thank you for your concern in this matter.

Dear Mr Buckman

I refer to your recent visit to this office whereby you submitted a binder titled, “The assassination of regional economics for the profit of the banking industry”. I note that the binder contains various documents relating to the issue you originally raised with this office in your letter of 5 January 2003.

A review of the material contained in the binder you have submitted indicates no basis for this office to change its earlier decision as communicated to you in its letter of 21 January 2003. Accordingly, while the binder has been placed on file, this office is unable to pursue the matter further.

Dear Mr Buckman

Thank you for your letter of 22 January 2003. Dear Mr Buckman

Thank you for your letter of 5 January 2002 regarding your complaint against the National Australia Bank (“NAB”).

I note your claim that a Chartered Accountant stole your company funds by forging signatures on cheques. You claim that this was able to occur due to the NAB failing to enact due diligence processes in verifying the signature on the forged cheques. I further note your advice that the NAB has imposed upon you and your partners the entire responsibility for these events.

As you maybe aware, the Australia Competition and Consumer Commission (“the ACCC”) is responsible for administering the Trade Practices Act 1974 (“the Act”). While the Act prohibits certain anti-competitive and unfair business practices, I am not convinced that the issues you raise are appropriate for consideration by this office. You should note that the Australian Securities and Investment Commission (“ASIC”) is the Commonwealth body that regulates financial services and enforces laws that promote honesty and fairness in financial markets. ASIC can be contacted on 1300 360 630.

You may also wish to consider contacting the Australian Banking Industry Ombudsman (“the ABIO”). The ABIO’s role is to help individuals and small businesses (including incorporated small businesses) resolve complaints, including all financial services provided by banks. The contact numbers for the ABIO are 1800 337 444 (free call) and 03 9613 7333.

In view of the above, I regret to advise that I am unable to pursue this matter further.

Thank you for bringing this matter to my attention.

Dear Mr Buckman

YOUR BANKRUPT ESTATE NO 2083 OF 2000/4 (A145)
I refer to your letter of 11 August 2003.

In response to your question, I refer to a conversation we had on 26 March 2003 in which we discussed the situation with respect to the National Bank.

I noted that the Official Trustee is unlikely to be able to do anything in the matter unless a realisation was possible for creditors - or clear indication of an offence under the Bankruptcy Act is seen.

It was mentioned that the trustee could write to creditors seeking funds to pursue matters and we agreed that this would be unlikely to be successful.

The trustee is still prepared to put the matter to creditors – but there is little hope that any would be prepared to allocate funds to this matter. As we have previously observed, the trustee does not have the funds to allow it to take this action itself.

Please contact me at the number below if you have any queries in this matter.

Dear Sir,

I note with interest your letter noted above in that you have conveniently ignored a major question put to you in my letter of the 9th of July 2003 accompanying a copy of my submission to the Banking Ombudsman. I will pose that question again in different terms.

Given the fact that the Insolvency and Trustee Service Australia is there to protect the interests of ALL my bankruptcy creditors, and that I have:

1. Expressly highlighted to you, the put my major creditor (the National Australia Bank) had in the execution of this fraud committed against us.
2. Expressly highlighted to you the fact, & provided evidence of, the unconscionable & criminal conduct engaged in by that bank culminating in my bankrupt status.
3. Expressly highlighted to you the criminal conduct & collusion by that bank with the thief enabling the execution of that fraud.
4. Expressly highlighted to you the bank’s collusion with their appointed Receiver & Manager to hide & disguise the bank’s ineptitude & criminal conduct in this matter.
5. Further highlighted to you instances where the bank continue to withhold company money illegally & in direct contravention of THE LAW - particularly the Cheques Act 1986.
6. Highlighted to you relevant sections of the Victorian Gaming Act where the proceeds of theft & fraud are directly recoverable from the gaming operators.

Question

Does your failure to pursue the recovery of these moneys & compensation constitute collusion & criminal conspiracy between you, ITSA and that creditor (the National Australia Bank) to the detriment of all other creditors including the Commonwealth, thereby effectively depriving them of their rightful distribution of money & compensation?

You have 28 days from the date of this letter to respond satisfactorily in writing to:

1. Why I should not prosecute you for collusion with the National Australia Bank to protect the interests of that bank above the interests of all other creditors including the Commonwealth?
2. Why your inaction does not constitute an active conspiracy with the National Australia Bank to protect their interest against all other parties including the shareholders of Basitech Pty Ltd acn 006 035 301, it’s creditors & myself (the bankrupt)?
Given your frequent written advice such that you will not pursue these matters (in concert with the views of ASIC, the ACCC, APRA, & the Reserve Bank of Australia) - then, I will perform your duties for you. If I am successful in doing “your job”, then I will be retaining “costs” as I deem appropriate. Should you wish to sue me to recover those sums, then please do so. I look forward to all parties concerned in this chardade justifying their actions &/or inaction as the case may be.

You, in particular, would rather recover money’s directly from me, again the easy target; rather than pursue the reasonable & legal recourse available to you from the National Australia Bank & others. You do so in the knowledge that the recovery of moneys directly from me further dilutes my capacity to pursue recourse & justice from the National Australia Bank in this matter for my creditors, others and myself.

Make no mistake, I intend to force the ITSA & regulators to actually regulate and enforce the law to protect small business people, bank depositors, the citizens of this country, and the victims of this unethical & criminal conduct. In particular, to cause these agencies to enforce the law when it concerns major international corporations & particularly the banking industry; that is, not just litigation & enforcement by these agencies against the easy targets - us - the people that have no funds or resources to reasonably or adequately defend ourselves. But also force these agencies to control the criminal & protected institutions that are active today.

There has to be a better way.

Yours in the fervent quest for ethics, equity, fairness, honesty, integrity and justice in the banking system.

Dear Mr Buckman

YOUR BANKRUPT ESTATE NO 2089 OF 2000/4 (A145)

I refer to your letter of 9 July 2003, in which you outline your submission to the Banking Industry Ombudsman.

You have indicated that, in the event of any financial award by the Ombudsman, you would be claiming a sum of $25,000 for your costs in this matter.

As you have previously been informed, any right to take action which rested with you at the date of your bankruptcy vested with the Official Trustee at that time. As the trustee has mentioned on more than one occasion, it has not proceeded to pursue the matter due to the lack of available funds to support the necessary action.

However, if an award is made in this matter – irrespective of the arena in which such award may be handed down – the trustee reserves its right to the proceeds. Moneys derived from any determination in this matter will be applied to the administration of the bankrupt estate in accord with the interests of the creditors of the estate, as provided for in the Bankruptcy Act.
If funds remain after payment of related dividends and deduction of the trustee’s fees and expenses those moneys will revert to you.

Please contact me at the number below if you have any queries in this matter.

In respect to the issues raised in your letter, I advise you of the following:

1. The Bankrupt is due any compensation from the Bank.
2. In fact the Bank is owed an amount of approximately $400,000 from the Bankrupt.
3. In respect to the alleged fraudulent acts committed, the Bank has and will co-operate with any sanctioned and legitimate criminal investigation by the Victorian Police Force. Previously the Bank has spoken to the Bairnsdale CIB.

9th of July 2003.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I hereby request that the Banking Ombudsman investigate the matter of the unconscionable & criminal conduct of the National Australia Bank in the fraud against Basstech Pty Ltd acn 006 035 301. I further request that the Banking Ombudsman cause the sum of $44,527.15 to be returned to my custody for dispersal to the legitimate creditors of Basstech Pty Ltd.

This matter relates to “Cash” cheques between the 1st of May 1998 and the 30th of November 1998 on cheques made payable to cash on “Not Negotiable” crossed cheques as promulgated in the “Cheques Act 1986” as amended.

Please find attached:

Distribution Set #1
- An Audio CD containing a 20-minute presentation detailing the criminal conduct of the National Australia Bank.
- An itemised Distribution List that details the people that have received this information. Distribution Set #1 has been sent to each & every entity on that list including two copies to the National Australia Bank – Mr Frank Cicutto and the Chairman of the Board of Directors.
- Explanatory Note #1 Timeline of Events, also attached is the National Australia Bank’s reply to this distribution set - An interesting document indeed.

Additional Evidence provided here
- Explanatory Note #4 Encahncement Issues.
- Explanatory Note #5 The true Financial Position of Basstech Pty Ltd
- A Statutory Declaration – This is an extract from Appendix 7 of my evidence to the Melbourne County Court in the case of the Queen Vs Brendan James Harty on the 1st of October 2001. Harty was convicted on my evidence to 2 years & nine months imprisonment with a non-parole period of 20 months.

This extract pertains to those cheques that form this request only. An information page (foldout A3) prefaces this extract and describes how to read the Cheque report (33 pages). Each page depicts one cheque. The last page of this extract is also an A3 fold out page that shows the National Australia Bank’s Customer Service Record (their Authority to Transact Business form) for our company Account.

- The Sentence handed down by Judge White in this case.

As can be clearly seen from the evidence attached and noted above, this event was criminal in nature. If one looks at this evidence it is clearly obvious that the National Australia Bank had full knowledge of these fraudulent events as early as the 1st of May 1998 and upon numerous subsequent occasions as seen and noted by tellers comments upon the reverse of these cheques. The National Australia Bank chose not to act upon that information nor did they advise us of that criminal conduct occurring. This is in clear breach of the Cheques Act 1986 as amended. In addition these “cash” cheques were written on cheques stamped “Not Negotiable”. Not Negotiable has implications upon both the holder in due course and the capacity to transfer title. This is clearly illustrated in Explanatory Note #4.

Explanatory Note # 1 The Timeline of Events

This details the events as they unfolded & the statements made are referenced to source documents, Police Evidence, transcripts of recorded interviews between the thief and the Police Investigating Officers, National Australia Bank documentation and my evidence to the County Court.

Explanatory Note # 4 Encashment Issues

This document references the National Australia Bank’s criminal conduct and details their breaches of law in particular against the “Cheques Act” 1986.

Explanatory Note # 5 The true Financial Position of Ilastech Pty Ltd

Details my companies finances as they should have been had the National Australia Bank done no more than their statutory obligations under a number of Acts of Parliament. In particular but not limited to:

- The Cheques Act 1986 as amended
- The Australian Securities & Investments Commission Act 1989
- Financial Services Reform Act 2001
- Trade Practices Act 1974
- Corporations Act
- Crimes Act

The National Australia Bank in effect gave away 25% of our cash receipts based upon forged signatures which they had detected, then when it became obvious that this conduct was instrumental in placing our company in an insolvent condition, the National Australia Bank proceeded to appoint a Receiver & Manager to liquidate the companies assets and bankrupt the directors & shareholders.

I request that you acknowledge this submission & advise a date when this designated sum will be returned to my custody. This sum of $44,527.15 is purely a part recovery of moneys that the National Australia Bank illegally withholds from us, and under no circumstances will the recovery of this sum be considered a “Settlement or reparations” for the criminal, unconscionable or predatory conduct of the National Australia Bank by that bank against us.

Yours in the fervent quest for Ethics, Equity, Fairness, Honesty, Integrity & Justice in the Banking System

Dear Mr Buckman

Complaint against the National Australia Bank (NAB)

I refer to your letter of 4 October 2007 received on 29 October 2007, in which you request the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA) investigate what you believe to be fraudulent conduct against Basstech by the National Australia Bank.

Responsibility for the regulation of superannuation funds, other than self managed superannuation funds, rests with the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA). APRA is also responsible for the prudential supervision of banks, life and general insurance companies.

I have reviewed your correspondence to APRA over the past four years concerning a number of issues, including those matters related to your former company, Basstech Pty Ltd. I understand that your company was defrauded by your then financial controller and that subsequently, your company went into receivership, which obviously had an enormous impact on your life.

While APRA assesses fraud risk as part of its supervision framework, this is aimed at ensuring that the fraud detection and management systems are adequate for the scale and type of activity undertaken by the regulated entity. As part of this process, APRA takes into account the number and type of incident in forming a view on the adequacy of fraud risk management and, where relevant, the fitness and propriety of management. It is not the role of a prudential regulator to resolve outcomes in individual cases. Hence, APRA is not able to assist you in investigating the conduct of the bank in taking the actions it did. These are matters it is able to undertake as an exercise of its commercial activities, but they are not unlawful or matters of prudential concern.

I regret that I am not able to assist you further with resolving your concerns.

Yours sincerely

Dear Mr Buckman,

As discussed on the telephone, would you please provide APRA with additional information in relation to the cheques that you state were detected by the National Australia Bank as bearing forged signatures and yet were still honoured by the Bank.

I will further look into the issues raised by you when I have received this additional information. However, I must note, that in carrying out our responsibilities, APRA is unable to disclose information to you regarding the outcome of any investigation. As such I will not be able to disclose to you any concerns, or lack there of, we may have with the National Australia Bank in relation to the information you provide; but I assure you, we will fully investigate any prudential concerns that arise out of the information presented to us.

Dear Mr Buckman,

Thank you for your letter of 1 October 2004 regarding your concerns in relation to the National Australia Bank (NAB).

As the prudential regulator of financial institutions, APRA’s responsibilities include ensuring, to the extent possible, that financial institutions we regulate meet the financial promises they make to depositors, policyholders and superannuation fund members. In carrying out that function, we value any information you give us about the entities that we regulate, particularly:

- the financial health of the institutions we regulate;
- the prudent management of those institutions; and
- the possible failure by those institutions to comply with the laws which APRA administers.

We treat the information you give us confidentially. We will not inform anyone outside APRA, unless you authorise us to do so, except to the extent that we are required to by law.

Even where you have provided us with information, the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority Act (APRA Act) restricts the information we can disclose to you or to the public about the entities we regulate and about the action we take. So while you can expect us to take seriously the information you provide, we will probably be unable to give you much information about what we do about it.

I have referred your letter to the relevant APRA manager for review and a response will be forwarded once an examination of the issues raised is completed.
